Introduction

All they wanted was a little warmth, maybe some food, and a promise that they wouldn't have to spend another winter on the cold streets of Old Town. It wasn't too much to ask for considering their predicament, but these two orphans had no way of knowing the man they hoped would prove their savior had long since gone mad with a hunger for power. Ever since learning about the Spire and the wish that destroyed all of Albion millennia ago, Lord Lucien had dedicated his every waking minute to rebuilding it. He knew there would be challenges, that one from the bloodline of Heroes might eventually attempt to stop him, but even he couldn't foresee the form that Hero might take. So when a pair of orphaned children entered his life one fateful night, possessing powers he had not accounted for, he did not hesitate to act. He reached for his gun, souezed off two shots, and gave birth to a hatred and thirst for vengeance that would haunt him until the very end.

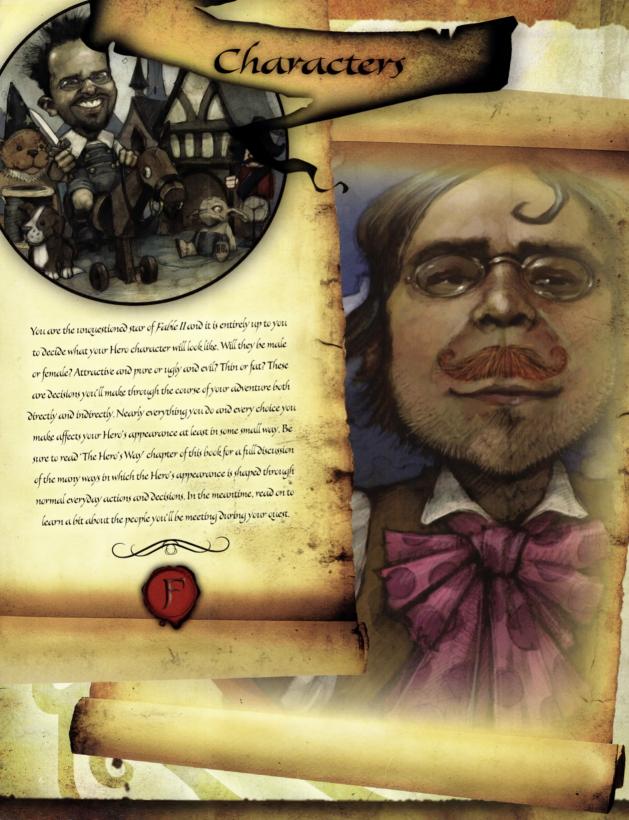

Fable II is a tale of a young Hero's quest for vengeance and the seemingly all-knowing gypsy by the name of Theresa who harnesses this young conqueror's determination and gives it direction. Theresa alone knows what it will take to stop Lord Lucien from erecting the Tattered Spire and she knows our Hero can't do it alone. Although they may be the anomalous fourth Hero whom Lucien didn't expect, they will need the Heroes of Strength, Will, and Skill by their side nevertheless. The task of felling Lord Lucien and his world-ending Tattered Spire will require the strength of all four of these Heroes as sure as it will take many years and involve much bloodshed and many sleepless nights. But no matter how steep the price, the Hero cannot afford the consequences of inaction. Not for Albion, and certainly not for the memory of his beloved sister.

ABOUT THIS GUIDE

You hold in your hands the ultimate reference book for the expansive world in which Fable II takes place. Here you'll find all you need to know in order to be the greatest Hero possible in every imaginable way, from swordplay to relationships, magic to home decorating, and gambling to love-making. The 'Quest Guide' portion of this book details all of your options for every situation in the game and lets you know beforehand exactly how a chosen outcome will affect your morality and purity, two very important facets of life in Albion. Knowing that not everyone wants or needs step-by-step assistance in questing, we've compiled the 'Albion Atlas'. This collection of maps is designed to serve as a spoiler-free guide to every chest, dig spot, Gargoyle, and Silver Key in the game world, not to mention much, much more. Lastly, it wouldn't be a Signature Series guidebook if we didn't include a thorough Achievement Guide as well-flip to the fold-out poster for detailed instructions on unlocking all 50 Achievements and boosting that Gamerscore of yours!

We at Brady Games thank you for purchasing what we feel is a special strategy guide for a special game and hope it serves you well. Happy questing!

RAITILIAR RACES

Barnum is blessed with the unfortunate combination of being one of the most dim-witted and most gullible people in all of Albion. His endless quests to get rich quick are all but certain to land him in financial ruin, yet you can't fault him for trying. Nor should you ever give up on him...

Derek was but a proud, if not unfortunate, city guard back in the days of your youth. Remember that day he asked you to retrieve the missing Search Warrants for him? You did give them back to him, right?

Enemies of Albion

If there was ever a man in Albion for whom everyone shared a communal disgust, it is Arfur. This crook would do anything for a gold coin, so long as it wasn't legal. His incessant propositions to Rose are enough to make you grit your teeth to this day. For the sake of Old Town, we can only hope you didn't sell him the Search Warrants.

Sam and Max are but a pair of aristocrat brothers who share a great curiosity for the dead. Or, to be more exact, the undead. They've been getting themselves into trouble ever since they've come across the Normanomicon. Will they ever learn their lesson?

Nobody knows where Belle came from, but she's made herself a fixture at Fairfax Gardens and is in charge of the seemingly endless archaeological dig taking place there. Visitors to the area report that she is only willing to speak with those who don't mind assisting her in her research.

Jeeves is Lord Lucien's personal butler, but wouldn't stick around if things became dicey. He may hold the information to some of Lucien's belongings if you ever need to find them.

What sets Fable II apart from other games is the degree to which your choices affect the appearance of your character and how other people react to you. Nearly everything you do in the game, ranging from your initial choice of playing as a male or female to the food you eat and the combat techniques you employ, impacts your appearance. Much of it—yes, even your diet—also impacts your moral standing. Since word travels fast in Albion and everyone will be forever making their opinion about you known, you must plan accordingly. Read on for tips about living a moral and pure life or, if it suits you, an evil and corrupt one. Or perhaps somewhere in between...

Good and Evil

Understanding the distinction between morality and purity is of fundamental importance in Fable II. Morality (i.e. Good and Evil) is defined in Albion as an evaluation of the choices you make that affect others. The decisions you make that help or hurt others impacts your moral rating and tilts your rating either towards Good or Evil. Your Hero will be adorned with either a halo or demon horns should his morality rating tilt 100% to either extreme.

Rapidly Good: Being good takes a bit longer, but you can quickly accrue positive moral points by giving money to beggars, donating large sums at the Temple of Light, earning gifts from villagers, and by completing Slave Rescue quests. The fastest way, provided you have enough money to do it, is to donate to the Temple of Light in 1000 Gold increments.

Rapidly Both: The fastest way to become Evil is to begin killing people indiscriminately and committing crimes like vandalism, theft, and attacks with Will (non-fatal assaults). This is especially easy to do in Bowerstone Old Town, provided you give the search warrants to Arfur during the Childhood phase of the game (this leaves Old Town as a lawless place filled with people few will miss). Making Sacrifices at the Temple of Shadows is also extremely effective.

Whereas moral dilemmas are those that impact other people, choices of purity and corruption only impact you. Some say these are a true measure of one's righteousness, as anyone can choose to respect the lives of others. Oddly enough, it can be harder sometimes to show ultimate respect for yourself. It can be hard to determine if a choice you're making falls into the category of morality or purity, but perhaps the best way to keep it all straight is to think of altruism and selfishness. If the actions you're taking can be considered either selfless or self-serving, then you can be sure that they will affect your purity rating.

Path to Purity: Playing the Lute increases purity, as does eating healthily. Avoid meats, alcohol, and any low-grade snacks and instead consume vegetables, tofu, water, and fruit juices. Lowering the rent at properties you own or the prices of goods at shops also increases purity with every person who comes into contact with your property. Wearing a condom is yet another way to earn additional purity points.

Lile of Couruptions All non-vegetarian food types and alcohol provide corruption of some kind. Gain high corruption by eating Rancid Beef Jerky or Canned Mutton Product, both of which have a -20 effect on purity. Increasing rent and the prices of goods in shops you own also lowers purity. Commissioning statues and showing off your trophies gains you corruption points for every point of renown they yield—it's a sign of conceit. Cheating on your spouse, having unprotected sex (or paying for sex) also earns corruption points.

Moral Standing

The morality and purity meters in the Personality page of the Logbook start at neutral and extend 1000 points in each direction. It's entirely possible to reverse a trend in one direction. For example, if you start out by Good and accrue 250 Good points, you'll need to then earn 1250 Evil points to push the Hero to 100% Evil. Everyone starts out inhabiting the morally grey area in the center and is viewed as "The Opportunist". This classification changes based on the position of the two needles as follows:

CLV%	EVIL	GOOD	CORRUPTION	PURITY	DEJCRIPTION
The Debaser	< 25%	< 25%	> 25%	-	You are too preoccupied with your own pleasure to care much about the fate of others.
The Decadent	-	> 25%	>25%		You would go out of your way to help others, but you're just as concerned with helping yourself—usually to food, drink and assorted pleasures.
The Demon	> 25%	-	< 25%	< 25%	Your every action is guided by malevolence. You care little for anything else.
The Fanatic	> 25%	-	-	> 25%	Your devotion to the purity of your body is only matched by your dedication to pure evil.
The Ghoul	> 25%	-	> 25%	-	You are as degenerate as you are evil. The world has seldom seen such a dark being.
The Opportunist	< 25%	< 25%	< 25%	< 25%	You inhabit a morally grey area doing what you feel like, when you feel like it.
The Philanthropist	-	> 25%	< 25%	< 25%	Your every action is guided by selflessness and the belief that you can make the world a better place.
The Purist	< 25%	< 25%	-	> 25%	The principle that guides your life is purity of mind and body, without too much concern for banal matters like "morality".
The Saint	-	> 25%	-	> 25%	You are as pure and benevolent a being as Albion has ever seen.

DEVELOPER TIPS

The following tips come from the developers at Lionhead Studios and Microsoft Game Studios.

- lf you hand the warrants to Arfur in Childhood, the Slums will have no law in later chapters. The region is then perfect for a crime spree.
- Remember, no witnesses equals no crime!
- Can't be bothered to charm people who have a potential gift for you? Just kill them, and you'll get it anyway. Obviously this doesn't work for shoot discounts!
- Buy a big house and decorate it with trophy mounts. Sell the house for a huge profit, then when the owners are out, pop back in and steal back "your" trophies.
- If you want multiple spouses, keep a healthy bank balance and they'll be more likely to turn a blind eye to each other.

Clothing

As in the real-world, the clothing you wear impacts the way others think about you, at least as far as a first-impression is concerned. Every piece of clothing, makeup, hairstyle, and even a tattoo brings with it certain effects that affect a Hero's appearance. Some items make you look more aggressive, others increase your perceived friendliness, and yet others might make you look more attractive or posh. Although it's possible to be unattractive and still make friends, most of the villagers in Albion will be more inclined to like you and offer you gifts if they consider you attractive—it just makes your task that much easier.

Combat Mechniques

The color and quality of your clothing isn't the only thing that affects your appearance. Your use of different combat techniques also changes the way you look. Increasing the level of the Physique ability results in your Hero gaining bulk and you'll get taller by increasing the Accuracy ability. Building up your Hero's catalog of spells and increasing the respective levels in those spells forces your Hero to obtain "Will Lines". Conversely discarding levels in these spells can remove, or lessen, Will Lines on your Hero. None of these are necessarily bad traits, nor do they have a negative effect on how villagers react to the Hero, but it happens nonetheless.

Hero's Best Friend

One of the biggest additions to Fable II is the fact that you now have a dog accompanying you in your travels. And what a great companion this dog is to have! Not only does the dog lend an emotional touch to the gameplay—nobody likes to hear a dog whimper or see one limp—but he also helps out considerably when searching for treasure and even jumps in to help during combat! There are also a number of quests that can only be completed with the help of your dog, thanks to his incredible ability to sniff out buried items.

Understanding the Barks

Since your trusted canine companion can't speak to you, you have to listen for the different pitch of his barks in order to understand what he's trying to tell you. Your dog makes three main types of noises and you should immediately stop and pay attention to what he's trying to tell you regardless the sound you hear. The dog's loud sharp bark means that he has found treasure and wants you to follow him. Your dog is capable of sniffing out chests, Silver Keys, and dig spots. Your dog will emit a low, scary growl when enemies are nearby; prepare for combat! Lastly, the dog limps along and whimpers when he's been hurt. He won't be able to assist you until you tend to his wounds with the Heal expression.

Enemies of Albion

logs of War

Your dog can help you in battle by finishing off downed enemies, provided he has reached a high enough level of combat. Your dog begins life as a Level 1 fighter, but you can level him up all the way to Level 5 by finding higher level "Dogs of War" books. Many can be purchased in Bowerstone Market at the Fiction Burns shop, but others can be obtained from traveling booksellers, or by scouring the countryside for treasure and buried loot. However, all Dogs of War & Treasure Hunting books become available to buy in the shop over time.

Once you've trained your dog to a suitable combat level, put him to use by attacking enemies with Flourishes and with the Vortex spell. Both of these attacks knock enemies to the ground, thus making them vulnerable to your dog's bite! Just beware that the more you dog tries to participate in battle, the more he's likely to get hurt. Heal him as soon as the fight is over if necessary.

Pricks and Preasure Hunting

Your dog can learn a lot more than just ankle-biting! Just as he begins life as a Level 1 combatant, he also starts out as a Level 1 treasure hunter. This means he can only sniff out dig spots that are close to the surface. There are five levels of dig spots and, not by coincidence, there are five levels of treasure hunting ability for your dog to reach. Locate the different "Treasure Hunting" books to increase your dog's ability to locate the deeper dig spots. Some of these books are buried in dig spots (in Bower Lake, no less!), but others must be purchased at the Fiction Burns shop in Bowerstone Market, or via traveling booksellers.

Treasure hunting is a plenty good reason to bring along a dog on your adventure, but we all know the real reason for having a dog is to teach him to do tricks! There are nearly a dozen various "Dog Tricks" books scattered across Albion that teach your dog different tricks. Just as in real life, the dog will only perform one of these tricks if he sees his master making a particular expression. Tricks range from chasing his tail to targeted urination and each trick is linked to at least two Hero expressions.

A big part of life in Albion revolves around your daily interactions with other villagers. Each of these people has several personality traits that make them unique (career, family status, sexual orientation, class, etc.), but their initial opinion of you is largely based on your renown, your title, and your appearance. The more famous and attractive you are, and the more impressive your title (e.g. "The Chosen One" versus "Chicken Chaser"), the more cooperative these people will be. You'll likely find that renown and popularity can increase exponentially once you get on the right side of villager opinions.

Every person in Albion has his or her own personality traits, likes and dislikes, as well as an opinions on you in three different spectrums: Hate/Love, Fear/Funny, and Ugly/Attractive. Many of these villagers have a particular threshold that when reached, will make them give you a gift or fall in love with you (desiring marriage). Whatever the facet, you need to move the needle to the right or left of the gift or heart icon, depending what side of neutral it's at. In other words, some people actually prefer fearing you or thinking you're ugly so you need to move the needle to the left of that threshold. The opposite holds true for those who want to think more positively of you.

The best way to change a villager's opinion of you is to see what their likes and dislikes are and either lead them to their favorite place, give them a gift (especially those of high value), or make expressions in front of them that they like. The Hero will learn dozens of expressions over the course of his quest and each of these can significantly raise or lower a person's opinion of you. The following table details the effects these expressions have on people.

Criminal Intent

Naturally, there are going to be times when you need to or just simply want to break the law. There are a host of crimes you can commit in Albion, but you have to be prepared to face the consequences, and the resulting drop in favorability with the villagers, if you commit them. Most criminal activity is met with someone calling for the city guards. They will arrive on the scene and immediately attempt to arrest you. This is when you have to make a choice: pay a fine (ranging from 10 to 500 gold per crime), do community service (clear enemies from an area), or resist arrest. Choosing to resist arrest makes you the target of every city guard in the region and you'll have to either put up a fight and make your potential punishment that much worse, or run and hide in a different region.

a conci

DEVELOPER TIPS

The following tips come from the developers at Lionhead Studios and Microsoft Game Studios.

- Increase your attractiveness as early as you can, that way you are more likely to get given gifts from adoring fans. Sleep in the gypsy caravan at the start of Early Adulthood for the attractiveness boost.
- Getting married is a great way to get a healthy dowry and bonus renown.
- The Lute expression is incredibly powerful when it comes to making people love you.
- Always make sure that you are targeting the correct person when you're about to give a gift, especially in a crowd. It can be tricky to pick the right person in a crowded situation so be careful.
- Upping rent lowers your purity and lowers the opinion your tenants have of you. Offset this by lowering the prices in a shop you own as this affects everyone in the village, not just your moaning tenants.
- Building up fines can result in a big, bulk payment. Technically, the actual fee due at the time of arrest can be limitless.

Sex, Love, and Child-Rearing

As time goes by it's all but certain that you will eventually want to marry and, perhaps, have children. Players wishing to live a chaste life, or one defined by prolonged loneliness, are certainly able to do it, but as your renown grows, so does the number of people declaring their love for you. Although it can be a bit more difficult to find someone to fall in love with you early in the game, when you're a bit of a nobody, it's much easier after returning from the Crucible, especially if you're attractive.

Depending on the villager's opinion of you, getting married may only take handing him/her a ring and then setting up one of your properties as a "Marital Home". On the other hand, if the target of your affection isn't already in love with you, you will need to convince them to love you. Your first step in doing so is to study their personality traits, likes and dislikes, and make sure your gender is aligned with their same sexual orientation. Then take them on the perfect date. Use the Follow expression to bring them to their favorite location, give them their favorite gift (or any nice gift for that matter) and make them laugh or do something they like. Once the red heart appears above their head, signaling they love you, all you need to do is give them a ring. Any ring will do with paupers, but you better splurge for a nicer ring if you're about to propose to someone from the middle or upper classes.

There are several benefits of having a spouse, but they do come with a price. For starters, getting married gains you a sizable renown increase and also provides a boost to your morality and purity. There's also the added benefit of receiving periodic gifts from your spouse. On the other hand, you have to give your spouse an allowance (use the real estate sign on the house) and you also need to maintain a happy household, else they'll leave and take your renown bonus with them! Nobody likes to be left alone for too long, so be sure to visit them every now and then and always bring a gift and do a little dance. As in life, a marriage with laughter is a happy one.

There's a Demon Door in Oakfield that's particularly interested in seeing a proposal... (Turn to page 154 for a full explanation.)

When it comes to having sex with your spouse, all you need to do is have them follow you to the bedroom, give him/her the Come Back to My Place expression and approach the bed and press the A Button. Choose to have protected sex for a purity bonus or have unprotected sex if you want to risk having a child. Note that there is no pregnancy period—the baby will be born within moments. Having children is a fun way to increase the size of your family, but it becomes even more important that you provide a sizable allowance, visit frequently, and always bring a gift for your child!

Of course, you don't necessarily need to have a family if all you're after is a little sexual release. There are plenty of prostitutes in the seedier sections of Albion and any one of them will be more than willing to satisfy your urges in exchange for a small fee. Just make sure to use a condom, else you might get a disease. And speaking of condoms, using a condom gives you enough of a purity bonus that it can exceed the corruption points earned for hiring a prostitute! Talk about a win-win situation!

Travel Options

None of the areas in Albion are necessarily adjacent to one another—you cannot physically walk from one town or region to another. Instead, as you leave an area the clock is automatically advanced a set number of hours dependent on the distance you need to travel. Some areas are only a mile or so apart, whereas others, despite "connecting" are 70 miles apart and require upwards of 15 hours of walking. Since you never actually travel the countryside between areas, it's both possible and desirable to fast-travel by selecting the area you wish to head to from the Regions list in the Logbook. Time will certainly advance based on the distance between the areas—and you may run out of time on particular jobs, sales, or quests—but this saves you from having to use regional exits and travel from area to area.

The downside to doing all of this fast-travel is that you may glance over an area and miss valuable treasure or other collectibles that you haven't yet found.

We recommend using the fast travel system for quickly traveling back to areas that you've already explored thoroughly, but continue on foot to the regional exit in areas to which you're new.

It's important to note that not all travel has to be done on foot. You can travel by carriage between Bowerstone Market and Oakfield and by ship between Westcliff and Bloodstone. Both methods of travel are 5x faster than traveling by foot.

Earning and spending money is a big part of your quest through Albion and, lucky for you, there's no shortage of ways to build your wealth, nor things to spend it on. There are dozens of merchants across the land that will gladly sell you nearly every item and weapon you can think of. A good deal of the money you gain in the game world comes from finding chests and dig spots, but you can also take a number of different jobs and assignments to earn money as well. Each of these options are discussed in full detail in the 'Pub Games, Jobs, and More' chapter later in this book. One of the best ways to earn money is by owning property and charging rent.

Property Management

Every purchasable property in Albion has a real estate sign near the door that details a number of aspects about the property. Chief among them is the Base Value of the property and the current asking price. Although the Base Value of a property cannot be altered, the price you ultimately pay is a function of how well decorated the building is, the local town's economy, and even the owner's opinion of you. Ideally, you'll want to buy in a town with a crummy economy and get the owner to like you (or fear you) so that you can get a good deal on the property.

If the property you buy is a home, you can immediately move in and set it as a marital home if you choose, or you can rent it out. If it's a business such as a merchant stall or a tayern, you do not have the option to move in, but you can adjust the prices of the goods. Lowering rent and the prices of goods is a sign of generosity and gains you purity points with every person who comes into contact with that property. In contrast, raising the rent or prices of goods increases your corruption rating. Rather than increase the rent, we suggest you improve the quality of the décor in a given house. The rent automatically increases, but you won't lose purity points since the tenants don't mind paying more money in rent if the furniture is of a higher quality.

Pay attention to the Sales screen in the Logbook so you know when certain shops are offering discounts on products. This is a great time to stock up on items, whether you need them or not, since there may very well be a shortage in the coming season. Just as shops often provide steep discounts (sometimes up to 75%) other shops will occasionally suffer a shortage and be willing to pay far more for an item than they normally would. The wily trader can make a fortune by taking advantage of the shifts in supply and demand!

DEVELOPER TIPS

The following tips come from the developers at Lionhead Studios and Microsoft Game Studios.

- Spending too much on shopping? You'll find that shopkeepers respond both to flirtation and intimidation. To get the best possible discount, use a bit of both.
- Still find your favorite shop's prices too high? Buy the shop outright, you'll get an excellent deal on its wares as its owner.
- Use carriages and ships to travel to sales that would run out if you had walked.
- Committing crimes lowers a town's economy; this is a great way to lower house prices before you buy.
- To raise the price of any property you have in the region, raise the town's economy. You can do this by buying and selling items and by doing jobs.
- Shops respond to the region's economy. Raise it to improve their selection of items.
- Invest any spare money in housing before going adventuring. You will then have a steady income while you guest. If you also set the rent low you can get a stream of purity, helping to keep yourself looking good!
- The stalls in Bowerstone Market are a great way to start a property empire as they are cheap, already populated, and enable you to have a discount on their various goods.
- When buying a house, make sure you take everything from all the cupboards before you rent it out. Also sleep in the bed first if it offers a bonus.

COMBAY AND EXPERIENCE X

The red meter in the upper left-hand corner represents your Health. The game is not over when this meter is emptied. Instead, the Hero knocks back the enemies around him and gets back to his feet. The only drawback to this is that you can't collect the Experience Orbs that were nearby and that the Hero gains a few scars. Having Resurrection Phials in your possession at the time of being knocked down eliminates these nasty drawbacks and instantly revives your Hero.

Although the penalty for being knocked down is rather minimal, you should avoid running out of health so as to keep the battles moving along and to prevent any experience loss. Shops, chests, and dig spots contain numerous potions and food items that will replenish your health when consumed. You can also regain lost health by taking a nap.

Earning and Spending Experience

As you travel through the world of Albion, you can expect to encounter hundreds of blood-thirsty monsters and money-grubbing bandits who want nothing more than to see you dead. Yes, combat plays a rather large role in Fable II and to that extent it also plays a significant role in helping you get stronger and earn experience.

Your Hero has three primary options in combat: melee weaponry, ranged weaponry, and Will. These three attack options are not mutually exclusive; you can use them in quick succession and even together to perform powerful combination attacks. However, they do yield separate color-coded Experience Orbs. All attacks generate green, general purpose Experience Orbs, when the enemy dies, but the more you attack with melee weapons the more blue Experience Orbs you'll gain. The same holds true for ranged weapons and Will, but for yellow and red Experience Orbs, respectively. Each of these different types of Experience Orbs is used to purchase new and ever more powerful abilities. These abilities are broken into three classes: Strength (blue), Skill (yellow), and Will (red).

B

DEVELOPER TIPS

The following tips come from the developers at Lionhead Studios and Microsoft Game Studios.

- Cast Raise Dead to keep enemies off your back while you dispatch them with ranged combat, you'll find aimed shots will pass straight through your undead allies.
- Kill enemies as swiftly and in as few hits as possible to maximize bonus experience.
- To really pump a foe full of damage, cast Time Control, Flourish them and pop them in the air, then fill them full of lead before they hit the deck.
- Use the Zoom ability with ranged combat. Target the reticule on an enemy and hold, hold, hold for maximum damage!
- Rolling is a great compliment to shooting, as you'll complete any reload you've started mid-roll.
- Use Sub-Targeting for different effects: To neutralize an enemy shoot the weapon out of their hand. To slow them down, aim for the groin. To do max damage, aim for the head!

Strength

The three Strength Ability categories are Brutal Styles, Physique, and Toughness. It's important to upgrade your Hero's Toughness and Physique right away so that you can last longer in melee battles while you get a feel for the combat system and moving around during battles. Next up, focus on saving up your Strength Experience for Blocking and Flourishes. Chain Attacks will ultimately prove useful, but not before an additional one or two upgrades to Physique and Toughness.

BRUTAL STYLES

STYLE COSTS
Style Costs	Flourishes	Chain Attacks	Counters
300	3000	18,000	72,000

Brutal Style 1: Blocking

Hold the X Button to block all incoming strikes, from any direction. You'll take a step back, but you'll be safe.

Brutal Style 2: Rlourishes

Hold the X Button to charge up for a Flourish. When you feel a rumble, release the X Button to deliver a blow powerful enough to smash through an enemy's block, or send unblocking enemies flying through the air! This will knock them to the ground, where your dog will be able to attack them. Be warned: if you're attacked while charging for a Flourish, you'll automatically block, and then have to start charging again.

Brutal Style 3: Chain Affacks

By timing your strikes perfectly, you can chain strikes together, speeding them up and increasing their damage. Watch for the subtle clues that let you know the exact time window in which to press the X Button. In addition, while reloading ranged weapons, if you tap the Y Button at the moment you hear the reloading sound, you'll reload instantly.

Style 4: Counters

Just as an enemy is about to strike you, tap the X Button while pointing the Left Thumbstick in his direction to Counter his move. He'll be spun around and left dazed for a finishing move!

PHYJIQUE

Increases the damage you inflict with melee weapons.

Enemies of Albion

The three classifications of Skill Categories are Dexterous Styles, Accuracy, and Speed. Although Accuracy and Speed are indeed important, you should focus on learning all of the Dexterous Styles as quickly as possible. The Aimed Ranged Attack skill will allow you to begin targeting the 50 Gargoyles scattered throughout Albion and the ability to Zoom and Sub-Target the heads of distant enemies is extremely useful. Mix in the occasional Speed or Accuracy upgrade if you have a lot of general experience, but don't upgrade them fully before learning Sub-Targeting

DEXTEROUS STYLES

STYLE COSTS
Roll	Aimed Ranged Attack	Znom	Sub-Targeting
300	3000	18,000	72,000

Dexterous Style 4: Roll

While facing an opponent with your weapon unsheathed, tap the A Button to roll in any direction. You won't take any damage while rolling, so use it to stay alive in tough spots!

Dexterous Style 2: Aimed Range Affack

Hold the Y Button to enter Aim mode, which allows you to manually aim using the Left Thumbstick. Once your reticule is close to an enemy, it will stick to them for easier targeting. Flick the Left Thumbstick while you're locked onto an enemy to instantly switch to other nearby enemies.

Dexterous Style 3: Zoom

Holding the Y Button longer while aiming will zoom you closer to a locked enemy. The more you zoom, the more powerful your shot will be.

Dexterous Style 4 Sub- Pargeting

While holding the Y Button to aim, hold the Left Trigger to bring up the Sub-Targeting cursor. You can use this to choose which part of the enemy's body to aim at. Use the Left Thumbstick to switch between body parts. Experiment with different enemies to see what you can hit!

ACCURACY

Better accuracy will allow you to increase the damage you do with all guns and crossbows.

ACCURACY COSTS AND DAMAGE INCREASES
Level	Cost	Damage Multiplier
1	600	1 25
2	6000	1 50
3	36.000	1 90

Level	Cost	Speed Multiplier
1	450	1 10
2	4500	1 15
3	27,000	1.20
4	108,000	1.25
5	324,000	1.30

There are eight different types of spells that you can use your Will Experience to purchase and each spell has five different levels. Each of these spells can be used effectively in combat (provided the enemy isn't resistant to them), but there are three that stand out from the crowd. By focusing your early upgrades on Inferno or Shock, Time Control, and Raise Dead you can effectively make your way through most every situation. Then, once you've gotten more comfortable with the battle system and are ready to experiment with other techniques, consider adding Force Push and Vortex. Blades and Chaos certainly have their place as well, but there are few enemies that Inferno or Shock can't handle, especially if used in conjunction with ranged weaponry.

FORCE PUSH

A solid wall of energy will push back all enemies around you, giving you more room to maneuver. You can also target single enemies.

DEVELOPER TIPS

The following tips come from the developers at Lionhead Studios and Microsoft Game Studios.

- The quality of your Henchman's weapons depends on how experienced you are as a Hero. If you've been playing Co-Op for a while, you may want to have the Henchman go to the Configuration screen, and re-enter the game, to see if his weapons have been upgraded.
- If the Henchman isn't using a save game, his abilities will be a copy of the Hero's abilities. Having the Henchman leave the game and re-enter it will refresh him with all of the Hero's current abilities.
- Since the Henchman and the Hero can have completely separate ability sets, it's a good idea to focus on taking complementary abilities.
- Solution Casting Vortex and Inferno at the same time with your Henchman can create a veritable firestorm of destruction.
- If you play as a Henchman while signed into a Profile, you may use the existing Hero on your profile as a basis for the Henchman. This means that you will have all of the abilities that your Hero has. If you really want to blow someone away, try playing the early parts of the game with a fully developed Henchman!

BOWERSTONE OLD TOWN

Childhood

Winter is here, and life on the streets of Bowerstone Old Town is tough. You and your sister Rose are just doing your best to survive.

Follow Rose through Bowerstone Old Town to the crowd gathered around Mystical Murgo's caravan. He has a Music Box for sale that he says is capable of granting a single wish to whoever owns it. Rose doesn't believe in magic, but a mysterious woman named Theresa challenges her beliefs on the matter and convinces Rose to take a chance.

Snooping Around

Rose has no choice but to leave her diary out in the open in the shack you and she share. Head in the opposite direction of the glowing trail to locate it. Stealing other people's personal belongings will typically net you Corruption points—and will usually require a bit more stealth—but Rose's Diary can be swiped without penalty. It's always a good idea to venture off away from the glowing trail to see what you might find. Those who follow the glowing trail without deviation will get to their target much sooner, but they'll also be far less prepared for the trials that follow.

it good and far-at least 10 yards-to unlock this Achievement. It might take a few kicks to get one to travel the necessary distance, so keep on trying. And don't worry about earning any corruption points, as everyone knows kicking chickens is just good oldfashioned fun!

Go with Rose to seek out work and earn the five gold pieces necessary to buy the Music Box. There are plenty of people in the area who need a favor done for them. You and Rose need only convince them to reward your efforts accordingly. Complete the quests described here to earn the five gold pieces, then return to Murgo and purchase the music box.

The quard's five arrest warrants blew off down the alley near the photographer. Complete Barnum's Image Capturing Device, then head down the alley where the crowd was lined up. This alley leads to the arrest warrants.

An older boy, Rex, has cornered a stray dog and is about to beat it with a wooden sword. Rose tries to interfere, but gets headbutted by Rex and knocked to the ground. Rush towards the boy and press the X Button to draw your sword. Repeatedly tap the X Button while Rex is highlighted red to strike him over and over. Hit him five times to get him to leave the dog alone.

Saving the dog from certain torture earns you Good +4. This is an unavoidable act of kindness that you must endure. regardless of how evil you ultimately want to be.

Continue down the hill from the dog to find the Warrant for Arson. Locate the Warrant for Sneakiness near the steaming grate by the stairs straight ahead. Continue past the warehouse towards the stacked crates to find the Warrant for Burglary on the ground to the right of the couple arguing (Pete and Betty) over the bottle of booze. The Warrant for Guntoting is obtained after completing Tramp's Treasure. You'll find the Warrant for Assault, which the dog from earlier has found for you. Now that you have all five warrants, head back the way you came and give them to Derek.

EVIL ALTERNATIVE

GIVE THE WARRANTS TO ARFUR

Artur will meet you in the alley near the photographer and offer to buy the warrants from you -he's clearly afraid of the guard getting these warrants back. There's no way a crook like Arrur should come to possess these warrants, but then again a gold coin from him is just as good as one from Derek. The choice is yours, but do know that this decision may have far-reaching implications.

The Birth of a Plero

Discover your destiny as you return to Albion?

Theresa joins you at the viewpoint overlooking Bower Lake and tells you it is time to leave. Run through the gypsy camp to your caravan and collect the items she's left for you in the chest. She's provided you with a Rusty Longsword, Light Splintered Crossbow, Placebo Health Potion, Dog Elixir, Collar of Holding, and a Spade. Use the Collar of Holding to name your dog—you won't be alone on this journey!

Caravan for Rent

You might not have any money just yet, but that's about to change. Approach the real estate sign on the side of your caravan and select the "Rent Out" option. It might take a few days for a tenant to move in, but you'll gain seven gold every five minutes (in real-time) once one does. Buying and renting properties is the fastest way to earn money in Albion. Best of all, you'll even earn up to a maximum of 100 rent payments while you're away from the game, although these payments accrue at a slower rate than when you are actively playing the game.

Follow the trail back through the gypsy camp to the main gate where Theresa awaits. Walk with her out onto the rope bridge to learn about the tomb on the island in Bower Lake. Theresa gives you the Bower Lake Tomb Seal and instructs you to swim out to the island and make your way through the cave under the tomb. This is your first step in becoming a proper Hero.

As an aspiring Hero you should now know that you are free to do what you want, when you want to do it. There is a lot to discover in this great world, and the shores of Bower Lake are a great place to start. Use the 'Albion Atlas' portion of this book as a reference and search for the many chests, dig spots, dive spots, and Silver Keys to be found here. You should always veer off the glowing trail and have a look around, especially when first entering a new area.

Consult the Bower Lake portion of the 'Albion Atlas' to learn the whereabouts of the Rusty Flintlock Pistol. Rusty Cutlass, and the first two books in the Treasure Hunting series. You can head to the tomb far better prepared than Theresa expected!

Take some time exploring the Bower Lake area to locate some of the chests and to find the books that can further improve your dog's treasure hunting ability. When you're ready to continue on, dive into the lake and swim out to the island in the center. Grab the Silver Key behind the tomb (you'll need these to open silver key chests), then go inside. Leap off the ledge inside the tomb to dive into the water of the Guild Cave far below.

Follow him to these dig spots and use the Spade (press Down on the Directional Pad when the icon appears) to dig up the buried item. Note that there are five levels of dig spots and that you will need to enhance your dog's treasure hunting ability by finding the Treasure Hunting books in order for him to detect them all. Sub Area

The Guild Cave is home to the Chamber of Fate, a special place in this once thriving academy. You must head to the far end of this cave to prove that you indeed possess the makings of a Hero. Keep your sword on the ready, and hack and slash your way past the swarms of giant beetles that emerge from the musty ground beneath your feet.

Hold the Right Trigger to absorb the Experience Orbs the defeated enemies yield. This experience will be used later to learn abilities, once you have earned the privilege.

Giant Beetles

Giant beetles attack in swarms and do most of their damage by slamming into their prey while flying around. These dive-bombing insects move slowly and don't inflict much damage, but they can bring down an inexperienced Hero if given the opportunity. They are extremely susceptible to all manner of attacks and can be defeated with a single slash of even the weakest of swords.

Some beetles, known as facehuggers, leap and latch onto their prey's face, doing damage over time. Mash the buttons on the controller to force them off. Some giant beetles tend to hang back and attack from afar by spitting a toxic purple substance. These projectile attacks aren't terribly common and are also quite easy to avoid, especially once you have learned the Roll ability. These spitballs inflict more damage than the physical attacks so keep your eyes peeled for giant beetles lurking in the distance. Use your ranged weaponry to defeat them as soon as they're spotted.

Explore the area beyond the gate on the left-hand side to find a chest, then continue along the main path. You'll soon come to a yellow flit switch that operates another gate. Use your ranged weapon to shoot the switch to open the gate and continue on to a gate on your left leading to a chest. Grab the Rusty Mace and head back to the main path. The path winds its way to a water-filled cavern. Swim around the area and explore the lower ledges where the skeletons of earlier tomb raiders now lay, and collect their letters. Continue along the upper path to the next cavern and use your crossbow or pistol to battle past the giant beetles on the bridges to get across the area. Shoot the flit switch up ahead then strike it with the sword when it repositions itself. Shoot it a second time after that to open the gate.

The room to the left contains numerous old bookshelves (some still contain books that you can take and sell later) and a pair of chests. Crash through the barrels and crates to reach the chests located here, then continue along the main path to the Chamber of Fate. Pause and take a moment to listen to Theresa's tale about the Guild and a past Hero. Step into the light on the dais to begin the transformation into a Will-using Hero. Follow Theresa's instructions and use the experience you've gained slaughtering the hapless giant beetles to acquire your first Will ability. Hit the red flit switch with whichever spell you acquire to open the Cullis Gate and step through to return to Bower Lake.

Ability Purchases

The Hero can spend experience for abilities in any of three categories: Strength, Skill, and Will. We detail everything you'll ever need to know about experience and abilities in 'The Hero's Way' portion of this book. For the meantime, use your experience to acquire the Shock spell and any of the Strength abilities—we recommend Toughness.

BEWITCHING REWARDS

Make sure to find all three skeletons. Each contains a note and a part of a tale. Regardless of the order in which you find the skeletons, the third always provides the final note. Finding all three notes reveals a before unseen dive spot in the pool of water near the sunken columns of the wooden bridge. You'll find a Bewitching Augment below.

Bandits

Bandits are the lowest form of human enemy you'll encounter. These sword-wielding lowlifes prey on innocent, helpless travelers and imprison many of them as slaves. Although they travel in packs, they typically lack the tactical coordination and intelligence necessary to develop any semblance of group strategy. As a result, they often attack individually.

The Hero can make quick work of the bandits with melee, ranged, and magic attacks. Practice mixing up your attacks to generate a higher bonus and to earn a greater variety of Experience Orbs. Although you can try to draw several bandits in close to hit them with a single area-effect Shock spell, you'll find it quicker to dispatch them with targeted spells or more traditional attacks.

Than is the leader of the bandits and, as such, is far lougher in a way. He's bigger, he's smarter, and he's way more appressive! All your attacks can be used against him, but it's best to not let him out loo close since he's pretty deadly with a sword. Stay on the run and hit him with any ranged weaponry you have as well as with a barrage of targeted magic spells. His primary attack is to move in close and strike with his sword, but he's also capable of taking a running start before attacking. Use the fact that Than lights alone to your advantage by backpedaling away from him without worry of being surrounded.

Deleat Thag with a steady assault of ranged and magic attacks to put an end to his reign of terror. Strafe around the perimeter of the area while holding the L Trigger to maintain a target-lock on Thag. Fire away at him with your crossbow or the Rusty Flintlock Pistol. Force Push doesn't work well against Thag, but you can quickly cast Interno or another magic spell to buy some time if he gets too close.

EXPRESSIONS LEARNED

You might be wondering what you're going to do with the Thag's Head trophy. Well, for starters, you can use the newly-learned Trophy expression. This allows you to show off your prize to all who will watch (doing so gains you renown, but costs you corruption). Additionally, defeating Thag also earns you the Dismiss and Follow expressions.

Go inside Thag's cabin to loot the chest near his bed. Thag's Cage Key unlocks the door to the slaves in the caravan outside. The slaver attacks if you free the slaves. You can kill him without repercussion and gain the 100 gold he would have given you for the key. It's a win-win situation!

EVIL ALTERNATIVE

LET THE SLAVER HAVE THE KEY

The slaver bought the prisoners from Thag and feels he deserves to be able to keep them. And ownership is 90% of the law, right? You can choose to give Thag's Cage Key to the slaver (he'll give you 100 gold for it), but it will put a pretty significant dent in your morality. There is an option for those who both want the 100 gold and don't want to gain or lose any purity points. Give the slaver the key, take the gold, then kill him and take back the key. You'll need to turn the safety off your weapons to attack him, but it's a small price to pay for Evil +30

Of course, once you have the key you can still free the slaves. thereby getting a net morality change of zero, and still make off with the 100 gold.

The New Hero

The terror of Bower Lake must be defeated.

50 Points

After completing the journey through the Guild Cave in Bower Lake, Theresa summons you to meet her in Bowerstone Market. The road is barricaded on account of bandit activity; you must head to the bandit camp in Bower Lake and clean out the thugs. Defeat the low-level Bandits that attack first to lure their leader, Thag, out of his den. Defeat Thag and lay claim to this Achievement.

5 Points

Kill a sweet, innocent, fluffy bunny rabbit (remember, safety's off!)

This Achievement can be obtained immediately after leaving the Gypsy Camp at the start of Adolescence. Hit the Right Bumper to bring up the Expression Wheel and turn off the safety on your weapons. Now look for a rabbit hopping around and shoot it with your crossbow or gun. It only takes one shot to kill it.

The Journey Begins

Travel to Oakfield and talk to the abbot

Bowerstone Market is a vibrant town filled with people of all walks of life, from the beggar on the bridge to the wealthy owners of the numerous mansions in town. Theresa has summoned you here for an important meeting, but there's no hurry to meet her. Spend some time scouring the area for treasure and getting your bearings in this rather large town. When ready, head to the clock tower in the middle of town. Theresa will use her powers to tell you she's been delayed. Spend the next five minutes working at the Blacksmith to earn some extra money, which you should use to buy upgraded weaponry from his shop. Consider purchasing the Light Yew Crossbow and Iron Longsword, both of which have a 30.0 damage rating.

You'll pick up a follower on your way into town—a bard. He'll follow you everywhere you go and sing simple rhymes about your activities and the buildings you visit.

You can give him the Dismiss expression to make him stop, or you can allow him to continue to trail you. The Bard will naturally attract a crowd so put this to your advantage and show off the Thag's Head trophy for extra renown.

Head north out of Bowerstone Market to Old Town. This area looks dramatically different depending on whom you gave the arrest warrants to so many years ago. If you gave them to Derek, the guard, then you'll see Old Town as a trendy neighborhood filled with well-kept houses, manicured lawns, and a thriving retail industry. Those who gave the warrants to Arfur will not be so lucky. Under Arfur's care, the town of the Hero's childhood has plummeted into despair and dereliction. And you have only yourself to blame (or thank).

Potions Aplenty

Even if you don't have the benefit of Derek's 50% special discount, Bowerstone Old Town is still a good place to score some extra experience. Not only do many of the dig spots and chests contain potions, but you can even find an Epiphanic Blueberry Pie too! Use these items to gain a wealth of experience and use it to upgrade your Skills, particularly the Dexterous Styles. Learning the Aimed Ranged Attack ability before heading to Rookridge will make your travels much easier and allow you to begin hunting down Gargoyles.

Have a look around Old Town, load up on potions, buy some new clothes, and consider purchasing a stall or two if you can afford it. This is a great place (assuming it's not the Bowerstone Slums) to invest in a business. It also has a number of dig spots, chests, and Silver Keys to find. Additionally, if you gave the warrants to Arfur and Old Town has been turned into slums, there will be a number of Assassination jobs you could participate in. Either way, continue north out of town towards Rookridge when ready to proceed.

DEREK'S SPECIAL DISCOUNT

Those who gave the five arrest warrants to Derek will see their good deed pay off more than they could have ever hoped! As sheriff, Derek has instructed all of the merchants in Old Town to extend his special 50% discount to you. It's his way of thanking you for the being such a good kid way back when.

You'll encounter this tramp on the road leading through Rookridge. According to the tramp, the caravan and its occupants were like this when he got here. He swears he didn't have anything to do with their poor, unfortunate demise. But, in his mind, dead people don't need their jewels and money. He might be willing to steal from the dead, but that doesn't mean you have to sink to his level. Ignore your temptation to make a quick buck and keep on moving. That is, if you're feeling particularly pure.

Why worry about the dead? You're not going to hurt their feelings, after all! And it's not like they it need their valuables in the afterlife. Help yourself to the treasures they were carrying. Piffer the corpses to find the Erudite Apple Pie, 50 Gold, and Milk Chocolate.

Quest End

The sound of gunfire sounds as you get closer to the mountains. There is a row of bandits on the ledge to the east. Take cover behind the rocks and use your ranged weaponry to take them out from afar; there are too many to risk an ambush. Having the Aimed Ranged Attack ability will really come in handy here. You'll eventually come to a bandit camp in a small clearing near a Demon Door. Continue to hang back and use your ranged weaponry to clear out the foes before moving in for a closer look.

Proceed to the broken bridge and follow the bandit's advice and dive into the water below. Swim downstream to the beach on the right where you'll find a dig spot, a Gargoyle, and a distraught man named Herman. You'll need to navigate the cave on this beach in order to continue through Rookridge.

The first time you shoot down a Gargoyle with a ranged weapon (will need the Aimed Ranged Attack ability), you'll get a Gargoyle Map and The Gargoyles side-quest becomes active. This quest doesn't have any effect on your morality or purity ratings, nor your renown but it can lead to great treasure! See the 'Albion Atlas' for the Gargoyle locations in every Region and be sure to check out the map for the Gargoyle Cave, accessible via Bowerstone Market. See additional info about the Gargoyles in the 'Achievement Guide' portion of this book.

Lead Herman into Hobbe Cave and start down the path after his missing boy. There are a number of dig spots and other treasures in this moderately large cave, so listen for your dog's bark. The path through the underground hollow is rather straightforward, with only one or two branches leading away from the main path.

Hobbes are small cave-dwelling creatures that rely on their fangs, claws, and maces to beat interlopers to death. Rumors say they turn small children into hobbes, but a few think they just eat them. Either way, they are certainly nothing with which to tritle. Hobbes attack with vicious aggression and typically attack in groups. They are capable fighters, known to block melee attacks with surprising skill. There are hobbes with rudimentary magic attacks as well, and others with explosive area effect attacks. As such, it is best to beat them back with ranged attacks and magic spells. Area-effect spells are particularly useful given their tendency to surround their prey. Hobbes come in multiple sizes and the larger hobbes are especially nasty. Take out the smaller hobbes first so you can concentrate on the larger ones without distraction.

Herman soon finds what he thinks is his son and dies by a hobbe with his son's voice—there's nothing for you to worry about, just keep moving. Follow the path up and around the narrow rocky ledge to the exit. You'll emerge in a small structure on the other side of the broken bridge.

Have a Nice Fall!

You can make quick work of the hobbes on the rocky spiraling ledge near the cave exit by knocking them off into the abyss. The best way to do this is with the Force Push ability, but standard magic and melee attacks can do the trick too. Soften them up with a magic blast to get them off balance, then strike with a Flourish attack to send them flying! Not only will you still be able to collect the Experience Orbs, you'll also get a nice XP bonus!

Have a good look around Oakfield upon arriving here and think about how you would like it to look in the future. You'll have the opportunity to choose sides in a war between the Temple of Shadows and the Temple of Light—as with Bowerstone Old Town, the choice you make will have far-reaching implications!

You'll be in and around this town for a while, so consider earning some money as a woodcutter and buying a house or a stall or two. The paths are a bit tricky to negotiate at first, so don't be surprised if you get twisted around. The path to the Temple of Light, where the abbot is located, requires you to cross the river, then doubleback to the southeast to follow a faint forest trail into the hills. You must approach the Temple of Light from the east, above the large ponds near the waterfall.

He has spent years trying to think of a way to exact revenge on her for breaking his heart and now he has the perfect plan. He wants you to get her to fall in love with you. Seduce her (use the Seduce expression from the book the ghost provides you) and make her want to marry you, then when she's fallen hopelessly in love with you, give her the Rejection Note the ghost has written.

GENDER NEUTRAL NAMING

The ghost in this quest will always be the same sex as the Hero and the target will be of an opposite sex. The unisex name "Alex" serves the story well in this instance and the only difference between playing as a man versus as a woman is that the male version of Alex is in the pub, instead of near the bridge. Alex is located in Bowerstone Market, near the main bridge. Head there at once and strike up a conversation with her. Instruct her to follow you to the clock

At this point, those wanting to do what's right should have her follow you to Oakfield where, instead of rejecting her, you can give her a ring in front of the Demon Door near the water. This will not only complete the quest, but it also provides access to the Homestead (and earns you a bunch of extra renown). Behind the Demon Door in Oakfield is a small plot of land with a quaint country home, a mill, and even a few chickens! Take Alex to the

You have to be a little immoral to get into the Temple of Shadows at this point, but you're going to have to at least gain access to this area if you're going to ever get all of the Gargoyles and Silver Keys. There are two Gargoyles and one Silver Key located behind the gate of the Temple of Shadows. You don't need to go so far as to offer up sacrifices, but you at least need to get in the door. Do-gooders should attempt the Defender of Light quest later.

The shadow-worshippers may be a pretty sadistic bunch of folks, but they're not averse to having a good time. That's why they leave the fate of their sacrifices up to the Wheel of Misfortune. Will it be decapitation? Will it be impalement? Only the wheel knows! Leaving the method of death up to chance isn't the only bit of fun the shadow-worshippers have; they also have a rewards plan! That's right, Shadow Loyalty Points are awarded for every sacrifice made to the Wheel of Misfortune. Bonus points are awarded for making sacrifices at night and those who sacrifice monks from the Temple of Light will earn even more! As a new member, you stand to earn a special prize if you can accumulate 2000 Shadow Loyalty Points at the Wheel of Misfortune.

Sacrificing villagers to the Wheel of Misfortune is brutally straightforward. All you need to do is convince villagers to follow you, then travel (either by foot or by using fast travel) to the Temple of Shadows. Lead the villagers to the circular area on the floor in front of the Wheel of Misfortune, then pull the lever on the right to start the Wheel. The villagers will be instantly killed by whatever heinous method the wheel selects. You'll take serious hits to your morality and purity with every sacrifice, but it's a small price to pay for a chance to win potions and more!

Fast-Travel Time Manipulation

It takes 13 hours to travel from Oakfield to the Temple of Shadows, but you're going to spend some time performing the sacrifice and wooing your next batch of lambs. This makes it difficult to ensure that each of your sacrifices is performed in the dead of night. Fortunately, you can mix in some fast-travel to Bowerstone Market or Bower Lake to switch up the time of day so that your trip to Rookridge from will get you there at night. Experiment with different destinations (or by sleeping for 6 or 12 hours) to ensure you arrive at the Temple of Shadows after dusk.

Good: -

Exile Sacrifice villagers and monks to earn Loyalty Points.

Depending on how much renown you have when tackling this quest, you'll likely only be able to lead up to four followers at once. The best thing to do then is to head to the Temple of Light and convince the monks there to follow you. Gather up as many monks as you can from the Temple of Light, then head to the Temple of Shadows to sacrifice them. You shouldn't have much trouble convincing them to follow you, provided you do a lot of dancing, arm-pumping, and flirting. It will take you several trips to the Temple of Shadows to accumulate all 2000 reward points, but you can earn over 600 reward points per trip by sacrificing four monks at night.

The fun doesn't end once you've earned your 2000 points! Now you can attempt to earn the legendary Maelstrom sword by making an amazing sacrifice during the hour between midnight and 1 AM. The best way to ensure success is to convince a villager to marry you (make sure you lead them to a marital home to make it official) and have him or her follow you to Oakfield. Once there, you may choose to add three monks from the Temple of Light to the group and kill some time with the Bard in The Sandgoose building up some extra renown while you wait for the clock to advance to morning. Fast-travel to the Temple of Shadows with your four sacrifices—yes, even your spouse—and wait in the lobby for midnight to come around. Rush down the hall to the Wheel of Misfortune and pull the lever to complete the guest.

Hollow Man

The hollow men of Wellspring Cave are unlike any creature the Hero has seen. They float nearby as twinkling lights, then plunge into the ground and erupt as ghastly reanimated corpses. Hollow men carry sickles, other crude melee weapons, and attack at close range. They are a slower form of enemy, but can be extremely dangerous as they tend to attack in large groups.

Hollow men are extremely susceptible to fire damage so make full use of the Inferno spell when battling them. A Level 2 Inferno cast targeted at a specific enemy will kill it on the spot. Melee and ranged weapons work as well, but neither are nearly as effective as fireball targeted at their dried up skin and loose, sagging clothes!

Lead the way through the second gate and take your place on the switch atop the platform while Hannah fills the jug from the next fountain. Hollow men appear in the room in groups of three and it's up to you to protect Hannah from them. Charge up Level 2 Inferno spells and target the hollow men one at a time with the Left Thumbstick while firing the spell to hit them directly.

Return to the central chamber and proceed through the third gate to the final fountain. A large gang of hollow men attacks on the way to the fountain. Pay close attention to the headless hollow man. He's tougher than most and will take a bit of effort to bring down. Draw them away from Hannah and allow them to surround the Hero while you charge a Level 2 Inferno spell. Cast it as an area spell to burn everyone in the vicinity. Continue to the proper location and stand on the switch so Hannah can bless the waters. This time, unfortunately, there is an interruption; Hannah must rush back to the Temple of Light at once!

Sub-Area End

Lord Lucien has sent one of his agents to the Temple of Light to inquire about an unusually strong woman. While this indeed takes a horrible turn of events, this tragedy has awakened Hannah's underlying rage. She renounces her father's pacifist philosophy and even her own name, adopting the more Heroic "Hammer." Behold, the Hero of Strength has been found! Meet with Theresa after the funeral to learn about your next task—tracking down the Hero of Will.

Quest End

Meet with the abbot in Oakfield to learn about the escort mission he would like for you to perform. Gain the 500 Renown the abbot requires, then you must escort Hannah through the Wellspring Cave so she can collect the water she needs. Use level 2 Inferno spells to protect her from the Hollow Men that attack. Follow Hannah back to the Temple of Light when the time arises to discover the Hero of Strength.

Good: Donate gold to the Temple of Light.

Bull: -

One of the easiest ways to accumulate morality and purity is to make generous donations to the Temple of Light. As you might expect, the more you donate the more benevolent you will appear. But there is a minimum donation required to receive any gain, and also a sweet spot after which the return on your investment is lessened. In short, you want to donate 1000 Gold at a time in order to receive morality and purity increases of +25 at a time, which offers the best bang for your coin. You can gain +25 per every 1000 Gold if you make your donations separately, instead of one lump sum donation. Use this technique to gain +125 morality and purity per every 5000 gold you donate. In contrast, a single 5000 Gold donation will only net you +75 morality and purity.

Once you've donated a cumulative total of at least 500 gold to the Temple of Light, you'll be asked to give again as the sun reaches its zenith to earn the honorary role of being the Harvest Benefactor. Making a sizable donation of at least 10,000 Gold between 12:00 and 1:00 pm will earn you The Rising Sun legendary weapon. You'll be able to make subsequent donations to the Temple of Light for as long as it is in business so give often and give generously.

Not only did Simon not know about this easter egg until he saw it during a play-test, but there was a bug early in the development process that left his character pantsless. The Pero of Will

Find the Hero of Will Return to Bower Lake and use the Cullis Gate atop the hill to join Theresa and Hammer at the Chamber of Fate.

Theresa needs you to head to Brightwood in pursuit of Garth, the silent mage you saw in the halls of Castle Fairfax all those years ago. Lucien's men are also looking for Garth so you had better move fast!

Brightwood is reachable via the road on the east side of Bower Lake. Proceed through this hilly region towards the stairs leading up to Brightwood Tower and watch as the Spire guards make their grand entrance, teleported into battle by the unearthly Shard.

Spire Guards

The Spire guards are an elite set of footsoldiers in Lord Lucien's army. They're also sent out to do his bidding, which explains their presence here in Brightwood. They also oversee, direct, and mistreat the slaves working in the Spire. Spire guards are capable swordsmen with a knack for defense. Equipped with a cuttasses, the Spire guards are capable of attacking with brutal efficiency.

The basic Spire guards don't have any particular weaknesses or resistances, but they are quite a bit harder to damage than other human enemies thanks to their training and thick armor. Stay on the move (perform rolls to avoid their sword slashes) and alternate between Flourishes and gunshot blasts. Use Force Push to keep them from getting too close and to buy yourself time to unleash a high-level magic spell.

Fight your way past the Spire guards with a mix of Flourish attacks and magic and venture inside the tower. There is a commotion upstairs—you're too late! A massive fire blocks your path, forcing you to stand by and watch as Lucien's fearsome-looking Commandant captures Garth. Theresa knows there was nothing you could do to prevent Garth's abduction, but she's already formulating a new plan. Return to the Chamber of Fate to meet with her.

CHOOSING SIDES IN BRIGHTWOOD

Two enormously different but related quests become active after leaving Brightwood Tower. Cold Comfort Farmer asks you to take sides with the farmer and avenge his wife's death. On the other hand, Red Harvest asks that you side with the bandits and eliminate the farmer and the farmer's guards in the region. You can only choose one of these two quests. They offer the same amount of renown for completion, so it's simply a matter of whether you want to be good or evil. Your decision here will affect the availability of subsequent quests later in the game.

Farmer Giles has already lost his wife to Ripper and has assembled an army of gun-toting protection near his house. Listen for the first gunshot aimed in your direction and take cover behind the tree nearest the path. Use the tree for protection while you put your rifle or crossbow to use against the dozen bodyguards. Kill every last one of them (-30 morality per kill) then finish the battle by defeating Giles when he exits the house. Use Raise Dead and melee attacks to make quick work of him and retrieve Giles' Cellar Key.

Forest Troll

The forest troll is unlike any creature you've seen in Albion thus far. It is a massive creature that spins in place heaving rocks and debris at its prey. It is also capable of sending a massive shockwave outward across the ground; it doesn't radiate outwards in all directions, but is a targeted attack rather than area of effect.

Getting close to the forest troll is simply out of the question. The beast is far too strong to attempt a melee attack. It's possible, but the reward doesn't justify the risk. Instead, keep on the move circling around the forest troll while watching for it to attack. Move out of the way of the attack, then stop and either shoot one of the weak spots on its body with your ranged weapon or, better yet, cast a Level 2 or higher Inferno or Blades spell. The spell ruptures the red sore-like weak spot that was targeted and inflicts heavy damage. Another option is to use Raise Dead to summon a distraction force of zombies, then move towards the forest troll and attack with a high-level area-affect spell to damage multiple weak spots at once!

Road to Westcliff

Where will Lucien's Diary lead you next?

In order to rescue Garth, you'll need to gain access to the Tattered Spire, Theresa has learned that the winners of The Crucible in Westcliff are being recruited by Lucien to be Spire guards, so this is where you must go to continue your journey. Return to Brightwood and fight your way past the bandits to the road leading to The Bandit Coast on the south end of the region. Hammer will be waiting for you. Hammer is all too anxious to let her massive hammer fly and you'll be glad you have her by your side when you get to the bandit-ridden coast up ahead. Battle your way up the path past the numerous bands of bandits to the bridge leading to their primary camp. The two of you should have little trouble massacring the bandits with simultaneous melee attacks. And best of all, you needn't worry about having to keep her healthy!

The main path forks along the coastal cliffs. Take the left-hand path to access a tomb with an exceptionally strong Troll Strength Potion in it, as well as another Gargoyle.

Hammer will smash through the blockade on the far side of the bridge and a number of bandits and highwaymen immediately rush out to defend their camp. Hammer will rush in to start pummeling as many foes as she can. This gives you the opportunity to stand back and cast magic or use your ranged weapons. The battle gradually shifts to the center of their stronghold and one highwayman emerges from the shadows. Charge your magic and let them get close before unleashing it on the lot of them.

Once the area has been secured, spend some time in the fort before moving on to Westcliff. There are a number of chests and dig spots here, as well as a Gargoyle to shoot. Gain a free health replenishment by napping on the bedroll in the caravan near the gate Hammer smashed, then wake up and head north through to Westcliff.

Balverine

Balverines are among the most terrifying creatures in Albion. They appear as though they're half man and half wolf, but are far stronger and faster than either species alone. Balverines use their giant hands and long nails to claw and tear at their prey with rapid swipes. Balverines are not only ferociously aggressive, but they are capable of leaping high into the air (completely out of sight) and landing behind their opponent for a surprise attack.

The best way to fend off a balverine attack is with Inferno magic, their fur is awfully susceptible to singeing. but there are other ways too, of course. For starters, try using a fast melee weapon and chain attacks. The balverine will leap into the air to break your attack. Quickly roll out of the way to avoid having it land behind you. Get up and renew the chain to finish it off! A Level 1 targeted Time Control is extremely effective against balverines. If you're quick, you can cast it almost instantaneously, rush behind one during its claw-swipe attack, and you get a bonus to damage on your next hit.

The road from the Bandit Coast to Westcliff leads to a narrow path in a mountainous section of the region. Balverines attack frequently along the path so be on guard. Soften them up with a quick shot of Inferno, then unleash some chain attacks with a faststriking melee weapon.

The Crucible Compete in the Crucible to earn passage to the Spire. Good: -

Reward Evil Corruption Crucible Trophy & 10,000 Gold

The Crucible pits you against several waves of every enemy type you've encountered thus far (along with some stronger variants). Most rounds consist of three waves of enemies. Successive waves only appear once the previous wave has been completely defeated so don't waste any time! Speaking of time, each round also has a time goal; beat that time and score eight Perfect Rounds during a follow-up visit to the Crucible and win a legendary weapon (so defeat numerous enemies very swiftly. Read on for tips!

However, there are smaller gold bonuses available to those who excite the crowd, even if it means finishing in a slower time. The audience loves it when competitors use the environment to kill enemies so look for switches, traps, and pits to use against the enemies. The crowd also likes to see a competitor fight with style so mix up your attacks, use combinations that could increase the experience earned, and do whatever you can to juggle enemies or don't sweat it if you can't do it with your current abilities)!

Before you enter the Crucible ensure you get the maximum benefit by equipping your weapon with a gold or experience augment, or even both!

Your primary concern needs to be simply surviving the onslaught of enemies in each round, but there are prizes to be had for doing it quickly as well as for doing it with flair. Beating the target times earns you Perfect Rounds which can lead to a big prize in the end.

Round 1

Giant beetles are susceptible to Inferno and the crowd loves to see whole infestations go up in flames with a single attack. Rush to the center of their spawn area and unleash a Level 3 or higher Inferno spell to wipe them out. There are three waves of giant beetles so make sure you get every last one of them. The third wave is a bit stronger and more spread out so make use of the katana's swiftness and finish them off by hand.

CHAPTER 1 "hallhar"

CHAPTER 2 Early Adulthood

CHAPTER 5 Late Adulthood CHAPTER 4 Happily Ever After

Round 2

Enemy Hobbes
Target Time 1:50

The arena with the hobbes has two switches that, when stepped on, cause a number of damaging spikes to rise from the square-shaped ring of floor panels in the center. The crowd loves seeing hobbes impaled on these spikes, but the spikes don't do enough damage to the heartier hobbes to make it a very useful tactic. Instead, soften the hobbes up with your most powerful spell, then switch to melee attacks and, if possible, either the Blades or Raise Dead spell.

Round 3

This round also contains hobbes, but these hobbes are a mix of magic-users and ones with a penchant for self-destruction. The arena contains several explosive barrels that can be targeted and shot to aid in weakening the hobbes in the vicinity. Additionally, you could also use melee attacks and Force Push to knock some of the hobbes into the pit in the center of the area (this also excites the crowd). Best of all, buy yourself some time while one of the hobbes rushes forward with a keg of dynamite about to explode. Lead this kamikaze hobbe towards the others, then cast Time Control to slow them all down. This will give you time to roll away from the blast while the rest are trapped in explosion.

Round 4

Enemy	Hollow Men
Target Time	2:30

The three waves of hollow men that attack can be laid to waste with a series of spells and attacks. First cast Chaos or Raise Dead to distract them. This is important since many of the hollow men here have rather large cleavers and axes and are capable of doing considerable damage. While they are sufficiently distracted, ready up a powerful Inferno spell to finish them off. Hollow men are vulnerable to Inferno and should fall in time.

Round 5

Enemy Bandits
Target Time 2:10

This arena is conducive to long-range combat, so grab your best crossbow or rifle and start targeting the explosive barrels on the floor and atop the wooden bridge. Shooting these barrels won't only kill any bandits standing nearby, but will also raise the crowd's excitement. Hold your ground near the starting point and snipe from there, but watch for bandits that rush the stairs leading to your position. Quickly cast Raise Dead or Inferno to deal with them, then return your focus to the bandits in the distance.

There will often be a small group on the opposite end of the arena, beyond the bridge, that won't attack unless you come to them. If the next wave of enemies isn't introduced after you kill all the ones you can see, rush down to the floor and go after those atop the hill.

Round 6

Enemy	Highwaymen
Target Time	2:00

This is a really fun arena to play on, even though the enemies are quite vicious and incredibly well-armed.

The arena has three large pits into which enemies can be knocked and it also has several explosive barrels that can be used to do the shoving. But that's not all! As highwaymen rush you, bandits attack with guns from the perimeter of the circular arena. Unbeknownst to them, there are flame-throwers mounted along the wall right behind them. All you have to do is step on the switch on the rocky bridge nearest the side you wish to set aflame and they'll instantly be set ablaze. Stand on the switch to keep the flames coming and to burn them right off the edge and into the pit!

Round 7

Enemy	Balverines
Target Time	2:35

Balverines may be vicious, but they are also highly flammable! Ready a Level 4 Inferno spell and wait for the wave of hairy critters to get near. This spell will instantly eliminate the majority of balverines that attack. Finish off any or balverines that attack. Finish of any stragglers with your katana, then ready another Inferno spell and wait for the next wave. Repeat this foolproof plan of attack until the round is cleared and you can collect your prize.

Success in the Crucible doesn't just bring fame, fortune, and a one-way trip on a slave ship, but it also brings the right to be called Lionheart! Head to any Town Crier to acquire this new title for free.

Now that you've impressed Mad-dog and the others and have won a spot on the next ship bound for the Tattered Spire, it's time you complete the rounds and tidy up any unfinished business. You'll be back—eventually—but it might be a while. Make the rounds and finish any incomplete quests you were working on before heading to the beach in Westcliff to join the ship.

The Westcliff Shooting Range is at the end of the path in Westcliff Camp. This mini-game of sorts provides an idyllic backdrop for unloading all of your frustrations on cardboard cutouts of bandits and civilians. With this being a town run by bandits, you can rest assured that you'll be targeting the citizen images.

The shooting range competition consists of three rounds. The first round is near the cabin on the left. The second is on the bridge straight ahead. The third is near the stockade on the right. Each round lasts a minute and you have to score as many points as you can to earn points (you must also score at least 15 points in each round to move on to the next round). You earn 3 points per headshot, 1 point per body shot, and you lose points for hitting a bandit. There are four civilian target styles:

- · Man in vest
- · Woman in Dress

Old Lady

· Merchant in Blue

Avoid shooting the skeleton bandits.

There is no denying that the shooting range is plenty difficult. Don't make it harder for yourself by using a weapon that is slow to reload or that has a slow firing rate. You should also upgrade your Speed ability to Level 3 or higher if trying to get one of the best prizes. Other than those tips, all we can tell you is to practice.

Head Shots

You should always aim for the head of the civilian cutouts during the first two rounds, but the targets tend to drop a lot faster in the third round so you may not have enough time to line up the perfect shot. If you can get the headshot in the third round then take it, but if you're having trouble lining your shots up in time just go for the chest wound instead. It's better to get numerous 1-point shots off than risk not getting any points while trying to earn 3.

Return to the Temple of Light in Oakfield and speak to the monks about the attack taking place in Wellspring Cave. They need you to head there at once and clear out the Shadow Worshippers before they taint the springs and ruin the Golden Oak's water supply. Follow the glowing path back to the Wellspring Cave entrance and go to the first fountain room at once.

Slaughter the bodyguards just as you would bandits or highwaymen, then target the monk and lay waste to him with a Blades spell or with your ranged weapons. Head to the second spring room and eliminate the Shadow Worshippers there as well, then proceed to the third room and do the same. The monk in the final room is none other than Cornelius Grim, the leader of the Temple of Shadows. He'll use his black magic to summon a gang of hollow men to aid in his defense, so keep back and ready Evil: Massacre Oakfield.

Are you truly evil? That is the question you have to ask yourself before accepting this quest. This devilish proposition will be asked of you after proving yourself in the Crucible, and only if you have made prior sacrifices to the Temple of Shadows. If you indeed fancy a chance at shooting the proverbial fish in a barrel. then look no further. Accept the mission at the Temple of Shadows, then head to Oakfield and speak to Wicked Wilbur to learn the details.

Your assignment is simple: Execute all the villagers and guards in Oakfield. The majority of them will congregate near the bridge over the river, in the tavern, and on the road leading up to the woodcutter's barn. The glowing path will help guide you to any stragglers (don't forget about those sniveling monks at the Temple of Light!), but some will return to the tavern out of fear so check back there frequently. The guards won't fall quite as easily as the typical villagers, but this only means they might require two shots from your crossbow instead of just one. Enjoy the slaughter you evil, evil, thing.

That's Mr. Fearmonger to You!

If you're undecided about whether or not you want to participate in this quest, do understand that you will likely unlock several scary expressions and even a free title or two during the course of this quest. Head to the beach near Westcliff Camp once you're ready to perform your Heroic duty and board the ship to go to the Tattered Spire.

Doing so won't be easy, as you need to leave your items, weapons, and dog behind on the beach. There's no need to worry about a thing though; Hammer will watch over everything while you're gone.

The journey to the Tattered Spire doesn't take long and, before you know it, you're standing alongside the other new guards, listening to Lucien speak. His lecture is one wrought with madness and it quickly becomes clear that you may never leave this place.

A week passes and you've been summoned to the Commandant. Your clothes are different and you're now wearing a collar that ensures your obedience. Explore the guard's quarters on this floor and locate some goodies, then proceed down the hall to the stairs leading up to the prisoners' area. Bob is there to lead you further. But more importantly, the last cell on the right contains Garth, the Hero of Will. There's nothing you can do to free Garth at this time, but the day will come eventually.

Continue onward to your meeting with the Commandant, at which time he explains the level of obedience he expects from Spire guards like you. The collar around your neck will not only paralyze you with pain whenever you disobey, it will drain experience too! The Commandant gives you ten seconds to follow his direction and step towards him. Use the Directional Pad to either thank the Commandant, insult him, or just stand by and do nothing. The choice is yours.

THE FINGER OF CHOICE

The Hero temporarily gains access to the Middle Finger expression upon meeting the Commandant. You can use this expression to resist following the Commandant's command to step towards him, but it

Good: Feed the prisoners.

Exile Let the prisoners starve.

It's now been 38 weeks since you first arrived at the Tattered Spire. You're gaining responsibility, but the Commandant is still wary of your obedience. You've just been summoned to the detention area and asked to watch the prisoners while a fellow Spire guard takes a break. The guard wants you to starve the prisoners, but you don't have to. Each prison cell has a large rusty lever to the right of it that controls the food supply to the cell. Pulling this lever will feed the prisoner inside and gain you +30 morality per feeding. You'll lose a lot of Experience by disobeying orders, but this is a fast way to boost your morality and come that much closer to earning your halo. However, you can only do this three times before you pass out.

EVIL ALTERNATIVE

LET THEM STARVE

Of course, you don't have to feed the prisoners. Sure, they might be able to work a bit harder if they weren't so mainourished, but that's not your problem. You're just following orders. And, besides, it's fun to watch them beg. Go ahead and admit it. Just don't complain when you loss 30 morality points for every three minutes that go by in which you don't feed them.

137 weeks have passed since you arrived via the ship from Westcliff and the Commandant has once again summoned you to his chamber to test your loyalty. Bob is splayed out on the floor and the Commandant gives you a Master Cutlass to use in killing Bob. For those following the path of righteousness, this is the moment you've been waiting for. Use the sword to attack the Commandant instead! Sure, you'll fail miserably in your attempt and lose more experience, but you'll gain a wealth of morality points in the process. You can also stand by and let the timer count down without taking any action. This will cost you 10 morality points, but you won't lose as much experience and won't have to kill Bob.

EVIL ALTERNATIVE

WITH PLEASURE, SIR COMMANDANT

If the Commandant is going to give you the honor of killing Bob, then why should you resist him? Take the Master Cutlass over to where Bob lies and press the X Butlon to strike him dead. This will please the Commandant significantly and not cost you any experience. You'll lose 50 morality points for the action too, bringing you that much closer to the devilish cretin you aspire to be!

If s too bad though, that so many years have to pass before you get another opportunity like this one ...

The Commandant can't harm you in his normal manner since Garth was able to destroy the security collar around your neck, but that doesn't mean you're in for an easy light! The Commandant attacks alongside a steady stream of Spire guards that serves to distract and backstab you while you pursue their leader. The Commandant doesn't just let his men do all the dirty work, he fights for himself too! He'll wield his massive sword whenever you move within reach of it, but he'll primarily attack with magic. Be ready to roll out of the way whenever standing in front of him to avoid the row of spikes he makes rise from the floor. The Spire guards protecting the Commandant don't share the resistances of their leader and can be kept at bay with Force Push. Use this spell to keep the Spire guards from attacking while you locus on the Commandant. Hit him with your most powerful spells (use Cure-All Health Potions to replenish the health lost while you're charging the spell) and with plenty of gunlire. The Commandant is susceptible to bullets, so put the Steel Clockwork Pistol to use to get all a burst of shots on him. The battle area is surrounded by electric current, but there is plenty of room to roam around. So long as you don't waste too much energy lighting the Spire guards and avoid standing directly in front of the Commandant, you should come out okay. The Commandant starts to warp around the room as the light rages on; use this time to ready a powerful Blades spell and hit him with it as soon as he reappears!

Use the Cullis Gate with Garth to head to the docks and fight your way through the swarms of Spire guards to reach the end of the dock. Don't stop and wait for the Spire guards to come to you though. Keep advancing across the length of the dock so you'll have the opportunity to make a last-minute sprint for the ships if things go bad. Congratulations, you're about to be a free Hero again!

A quick chat with him is all it takes to realize that he's actually interested in men, not women. Rupert gives you a photo of himself for you to use in finding him a suitable partner.

Head to Bowerstone Market in search of a gay man to show the photo to. There aren't that many men in Bowerstone Market who aren't already spoken for, let alone who are gay, but there is sure to be one out there who is not only gay, but quite impressed by the photo of Rupert. Not only will you receive 1500 renown for your efforts, but Barnum is set to pay you back with interest! And thanks to that stay at the Tattered Spire, your money has grown to 15,000 Gold!

And speaking of Westcliff, there are plenty of improvements you should check out thanks to Barnum. Lots of new chests to get, a new bridge connecting the camp with the road to Bandit Coast, and the Shooting Range is easier than ever!

Return to the Guild Cave in Bower Lake when you're finished taking care of business. The initial meeting between Hammer and Garth doesn't go as smoothly as Theresa had hoped, but everyone is ready to get to work searching for the Hero of Skill. There's a rumor that the Hero of Skill is in the port town of Bloodstone, but getting there requires traveling through the dreaded Wraithmarsh. Stranded

You are straided in Wraithmarsh. You must find your way through to Bloodstone

Garth and Hammer didn't make it through the Cullis Gate before it malfunctioned, but that doesn't mean you're alone. A crazed inhabitant of the marshes found your unconscious body and locked you up in a cage. Fortunately, the man quickly succumbs to the creatures of the fog and your dog retrieves the key to the cage. You're free once again, but the marshes are a dangerous place to be alone.

Explore the area north and south of the cage where you begin this leg of the journey, then head west towards the drowned farm. A banshee makes an appearance in the water in the center of this former town square. Put some distance between you and it, wipe out the banshee children, then target its head with your ranged weapon; banshees are particularly vulnerable to arrow damage, so ready your crossbow if you have one.

Banshee

Banshees are unlike other creatures you've encountered in that they float above the ground and use their powers to summon a cadre of shadow creatures to attack. The banshee itself will attack with a powerful Soul Suck attack if you stray too close, but they tend to let their minions fight for them. Wipe out the little critters with an area spell, then take aim at the main attraction.

Banshees are immune to the Chaos spell and tend to be unaffected by area spells thanks to their ability to float. You can inflict significant damage with melee attacks and targeted spells, but the absolute best way to handle a banshee is with a Master Repeater Crossbow. Stand back and wait for the banshee to cover her face with her hands. That's your signal that the banshee can be targeted. Use the crossbow, preferably with the Sub-Targeting ability, and fire a quick barrage of six arrows straight into its head—you don't even need to reload! It's possible to drop a banshee with a Master-level crossbow in just a few shots, provided you aim for the head!

Wade through the water of the drowned farm and briefly ignore the path on the left so as to inspect the former town of Oakvale up ahead. It's a sad sight for sure, not to mention a reminder of what could happen when one lets their thirst for power to get the better of them. Have a look around for a digging spot, then head back the way you came and take the path up the hill and across the bridge.

Fight your way past the hollow men, including an elder, that begin to enter the area as you make your way up the hill and across another large bridge. This one leads to a massive circle of tombs. The area is flooded both with water and with an approaching gang of hollow men of varying degrees of toughness. Stand back and hurl Inferno spells at them, then switch to your ranged weapon and take them out with carefully aimed headshots. Employ the same strategy for the banshee that appears in the marsh farther to the east.

Continue through the swamp to the next encounter with a troll. This particular troll has some pretty resistant weak spots on its body (resistant to Inferno and Blades spells in addition to Chaos) and it moves a bit quicker than other trolls you've faced. There are several ways to go about defeating this particular troll, including using Time Control and Vortex to destroy many of the weak spots in a single attack. Cast a Level 1 Time Control spell to buy yourself time to cast a Level 2 or 3 Time Control spell. Run behind the troll and unleash as powerful a Vortex spell as you can to rupture several weak spots at once. You can also use your ranged weaponry and the Sub-Targeting ability to pop the weak spots one at a time from a safe distance. Use the ruins on the ground for cover or head to the bridge. Defeat the troll and continue to the northeast to exit the area and travel to Bloodstone.

BRIDGE OVER TROLL-FILLED WATERS

When fighting the troll in Wraithmarsh, if you attack it from the bridge behind it, it will be unable to hit you with the ground snake attack at all. If you position yourself correctly, no attack from the troll will be able to hit you, including thrown rocks.

as they simply shatter on the railings of the bridge. In addition, from the vantage point of the bridge, when the troll bends down to grab a rock, the weak points on its back are visible to be shot at.

BLOODSTOPE

The flero of Skill

Find Reaver and convince him to join your cause.

Congratulations on surviving the journey through Wraithmarsh. Theresa and Garth's belief that Reaver is hanging out in Bloodstone has been proven true. There is a mansion at the east side of town, in the hills, that belongs to him. There's no need to hurry over to him right away; he's not going anywhere. Take all the time you need to have a look around and to dig up the many pieces of treasure that lurk both on and off the shore of this harbor town. Head to Reaver's mansion after embarking on any of the optional quests that may provide additional renown.

Chest Hunting

Many of the buildings in Bloodstone have a side-entrance that leads directly to the second floor living space. You can often find chests located in the rooms upstairs, specifically behind a pile of breakable crates and barrels.

Reaver has been expecting you and has given considerable thought to the request you no doubt have of him. He agrees to join you and the others in your foolish attack against Lucien only if you manage to return Reaver's Dark Seal to its rightful owner in Wraithmarsh. Pick up the seal from the table and leave the way you came. It's clear from speaking to Reaver that the favor he asks of you is one fraught with considerable risk—you should indeed spend some time completing other quests before taking on this challenge.

Pay a visit to the tavern in Bloodstone and speak to the old sailor standing off to the left. Oblige him when he asks for you to buy him a beer and listen closely to his tale. Salty Jack will tell you all about the smuggler's cave and the pirate ghost he's seen. He needs you to investigate the cave and vouch for him. Exit the bar and follow the path around the south side of the harbor, around the rocky headland near the sea and into the Sinkhole cave.

Continue through the galley to the locked door up ahead. Smash the crates on the side of the room and step on the switch beneath it to open the door to Captain Dread's bedroom. Use Captain Dread's Key on the nightstand to open the chest containing the Lever. Head back outside to the wooden walkway and use the lever to open the floodgates. This raises the ship off the rocks and makes it suitable for plying the waters once again. First things first; you have to defeat Captain Dread.

Board the ship and use a combination of Time Control, Inferno, and well-aimed ranged attacks to obliterate the three waves of ghost pirates that attack. Captain Dread will stand back and watch the mayhem, so ignore him until he begins to move around and attack. There are a lot of ghost pirates to contend with but they are vulnerable to Inferno and can be defeated quickly with the powerful fire spell.

There aren't many places where you can make a 500 feet dive so rather than attempt to jump off every cliff you see, let us tell you exactly where to do it. Head to Bloodstone and walk along the southern shore to the entrance to the Sinkhole cave. Enter this out-of-the-way cavern (you'll need to visit this area during the Treasure Island of Doom quest) and dive off the ledge straight ahead to earn this Achievement.

Enter the cave and dive off the platform into the water far, far below. Swim out onto the rocks and make your way along the path past the secret pirate ship hidden away inside this grotto. Climb the wooden walkways beyond the ship and head inside. Draw your ranged weapon and prepare for battle against a number of pirate ghosts. Continue on to the mess hall where a dozen or so pirate ghosts launch their attack. Use the Time Control spell to slow them down while you ready a high level spell like Inferno or Vortex.

House Eve Aire

You've finally reached the source of the constant sobbing, a woman standing alone in front of an altar of sorts. Three shadow spirits soon appear and demand that one of you be sacrificed as punishment for possessing the Dark Seal. It doesn't matter to them which of you are sacrificed, but whomever is left holding the Dark Seal will be aged prematurely and permanently. Since the woman had nothing to do with the favor you're performing for Reaver—and because you really want "The Paragon" Achievement—you should hold onto the seal and take whatever punishment comes with it.

Exit the Shadow Court via the spiraling stairs behind you. This leads to a chest behind a locked gate and the main door back out to Wraithmarsh.

EVIL ALTERNATIVE

Press the A Button to trand the Dark Seal to the woman and let her hold it as the spirit's countdown (you'll feel the controller vibrate) commences. Sure, the woman is quite young and it is a shame to sacrifice her youth, but you can't always be expected to do what's right.

No Going Back!

Just in case you don't hear Theresa's warning, we'll reiterate it here. Returning to Reaver in Bloodstone sets actions in motion that cannot be reversed, nor will you be able to break away to do other things once they begin. If you have any unfinished business at this time, we recommend you do it now. We suggest completing the following quests before going back to Reaver... or forever hold your peace.

Visit the gravekeeper in the mansion at the north end of Bowerstone Cemetery to find out about his troubles. He's a bit hesitant to speak to strangers, but he'll eventually ask you for help in collecting the body parts of the deceased Lady Grey; he's trying to bring her back to life. Agree to help him and fast-travel to Hobbe Cave at Rookridge to look for the first body part: the lower body. Follow your dog past the swarming hobbes to the dig spot and use your spade to dig up Lady Grey's Lower Body and the First Witchspotters Note. Return to the gravekeeper to find the location of the second body part. He's in the library.

The second body part is located in Twinblade's Tomb in Wraithmarsh. Travel to the Bloodstone Road corner of Wraithmarsh and enter the tomb in the northwest corner of the swamp.

Twinblade's Tomb doesn't contain much in the way of treasure, but what it lacks in collectibles it makes up for with hordes of hollow men and a plethora of gates and doorways controlled by flit switches and switch plates. There is only one path through the tomb, so it's all but impossible to get lost, but many of the doors are locked. You'll need to stand on the switch plate in the room or shoot the flit switch in order to open the door. Many of the flit switches require more than one shot and some require a melee strike. Just remember that the color of the flit switches matches up with the color of the X, Y, and B Buttons on your controller so you simply have to hit it with the corresponding attack.

The tomb also has a unique expression statue serving as part of its security system.

Stand on the switch plate in the room with the green-glowing statue and match the statue's expression to open the door. In this case, you'll need to perform the Chicken expression. With that done, head up the stairs on the left and shoot the flit switch in the distance to unlock the door below. Use the Raise Dead and Inferno spells to thwart the attacks of the hollow men in the attacks of the hollow men in the circular room and quickly shoot the flit switch as it repositions itself on each of the statues. Use the switch at the end of the corridor to open the final gate where you'll find Lady Grey's Upper Body and the Second Witchspotters Note.

Return to the gravekeeper in Bowerstone Cemetery and hand over the second body part. You're two-thirds of the way through helping him; now he needs you to visit Lady Grey's Tomb in Fairfax Gardens to retrieve her head. Sure it's gruesome, but it's in the name of science! One of the gated areas in Fairfax Gardens is now open so head there at once and enter Lady Grey's Tomb on the north side of the area.

Locate the chests in the corners of the dark, sand-filled room you descend into, then take Lady Grey's Head and the Third Witchspotters Note from the casket on the altar. Hack and slash your way past the giant beetles lurking in the sand and head up the stairs at the far end of the tomb to exit outside the other tomb in Fairfax Gardens.

Return to the gravekeeper's mansion in Bowerstone Cemetery and meet him in his basement research laboratory. Hand over the third and final body part and watch in awe as he brings Lady Grey back from the dead. Unfortunately, the gravekeeper's experiment had one unexpected drawback—Lady Grey will fall in love with the first person she sees. And that person is you! You have to quickly exit the basement before her love for you becomes irreversible. Head upstairs to the main foyer so the gravekeeper can have his chance at love with Lady Grey. You'll be able to hear their conversation from upstairs and know how the quest ends.

The Bowerstone Cemetery Mansion becomes available for purchase after completion of the Love Hurts quest and at a cost of 100,000 Gold. Purchase the building to gain the Gravekeeper's Key and Gravekeeper's Note, a note detailing the location of a nearby crypt. Use the key to unlock the gate near the scrap yard in Bowerstone Cemetery and head inside Shelley Crypt to see what treasures you might find.

Head down the path to the crypt to where the rows of web-covered sarcophagi are lined up. Explore the path to the north to find The Stone of Myr'Bregothil, an incredibly powerful augment. Securing the precious stone was easy, but now you have to find a way out! Smash through the cracked wall to find what can only be described as a former torture chamber. Lay waste to the hollow men that attack, gather up the treasure your dog inevitably sniffs out, and continue south to the room with the flit switch.

It might not seem like there is a way across this room full of pedestals and empty space, but a series of light bridges forms as you hit the flit switches. Strike the blue flit switch on the near side of the void, then shoot it when it repositions itself to create a Good: Run Toby out of town.

EVIL Kill Toby.

Pay a visit to the balding man on the second floor of the building on the hill in Bloodstone to learn about the Temple of Benevolent Yokels (T.O.B.Y.) led by the man they call Toby. Toby is deeply disturbed by the filth and immorality in Bloodstone and would like your help in retrieving several items for use in a ceremony that will help run the riffraff out of town. Follow his instructions (and the glowing path) to each of the three houses Toby describes and retrieve the food items he specified. The first two items, the Mutton of Eternal Hope and the Wine of Forgiveness, are located in dressers on the second floor of the houses he specifies. The third item, the Sacred Pie of Kindness, is in the cupboard on the ground floor.

Toby's next request is for you to bring him a prostitute so he can try and teach her the error of her ways. Of course, he wants you to leave him alone while he "talks" to her. Bring him the prostitute as he requests, then speak to the man in the street to learn the truth about Toby. It turns out he's actually a conartist and pulls stunts like this all the time.

Head back to Toby's house and knock on the door until he answers it—it will take at least four or five knocks before he finally opens up. Step inside the house and use the scary expressions like Growl, Bloodlust Roar, and Slap to scare him into leaving town. The Threaten expression works well too, but you may not have been evil enough to earn it.

You could spend a few minutes trying to scare Toby out of town with a bunch of growls and threats, but doesn't lie deserve more than that? After all, this is the guy who had you running all over town like a trained dog. Guys like Toby don't deserve to be treated gently. Not in towns like Bloodstone and not by the likes of you. Grab your blade and fillet him on the spot. You owe it to yourself.

Follow your dog through Wraithmarsh to the entrance to The Well and climb down the ladder.

Run through the ankle-deep water towards the large cavern in the distance where Sam and Max have managed to get themselves surrounded by a gang of hostile hollow men. Put your Time Control and Inferno spells to use and help the brothers out.

Return to Reaver's Mansion in Bloodstone once you're ready to tackle Lucien. Reaver has discovered that you escaped from the Spire, and figured he could earn some coin by selling you out to Lucien. Unfortunately for him, Lucien needs Reaver as much as he needs you, and has sent forces to Bloodstone to capture the pirate king. Your only hope is to escape through the secret cavern known as Reaver's Rear Passage.

The chest of drawers right next to the entrance to Reaver's Rear

it. Just search the chest to pick up a cool 1000 gold!

Follow Reaver through his secret study and out onto the walkway in the cavern behind it. A wave of Spire guards attacks from the walkways on the right-hand side of the cave. Hold your ground alongside Reaver and use your ranged weaponry and the Sub-Targeting ability to pick them off with a bevy of headshots. Look for groups of enemies gathered together, release the L Trigger so you can aim manually, and target the barrels of explosives scattered about. Advance up the walkway the Spire guards were on to lay claim to the Live Forever Health Potion located there, then turn and eliminate the Spire guards flooding in from the other side.

Push on deeper into the cavern to the cavern with the two railcar trestles. Quickly target the explosives on the upper bridge to blow the massive stalactites off the ceiling and down onto the Spire guards below. Avoid detonating the barrels of explosive on the lower tracks as you cross the bridge into the cave at the other end. This passage leads you up several flights of stairs to the upper walkway where the Spire quards were moments ago. Turn and fire on the barrels in the mine cars below (the ones you just ran past) to knock the Spire guards into the abyss. Reaver encourages you to keep on moving and that's precisely what you should do. Smash through the boards to exit out onto Smuggler's Beach where Hammer and Garth stand waiting. And where more Spire guards are coming...

Spoiler Alert!

The remaining components of this quest guide provide instructions through to the very ending of the game. We suggest you close the book and read no further until you get to the final choice Theresa presents to you—you might want our help in making that decision. Nevertheless, we will cover everything that happens between now and then as spoiler-free as possible just in case you get into trouble.

You wake to the sound of Rose's voice. You're both children again, but you're not in Bowerstone Old Town. No. you're on a picturesque farm, living in a beautiful house, and you haven't a care in the world. Follow Rose outside to the farm and practice your swordsmanship by defeating the 8 giant beetles that rise up out of the mud. Rose is such a great sister she even set up 20 bottles for you to shoot with your Toy Gun. The bottles are set up on walls, wagons, near the docks, and even in trees. Of course, you're just a kid having fun so you don't actually have to shoot them if you don't want to. You could always kick the chickens back into their pen if you feel like doing that instead.

Enjoy the day however you see fit, then head to bed when it gets dark and Rose calls you in to sleep. The sound of music interrupts your slumber. Ignore Rose's pleas to stay inside and head down the path, away from the pond, towards the sound of the music box. Take it in your hands, for it is the weapon of which Theresa spoke.

Good

Climb the steps to where Lucien is standing with Hammer, Garth, and Reaver. The three Heroes you've worked so hard to convince to join you are now being sucked empty of their powers; Lucien is between them, growing stronger on their Heroic strengths as you read this. Fortunately, you have the one thing that can take Lucien's power from him. Stand tall and press and hold the A Button to use the Music Box to capture Lucien's power from him. Once drained of his power, he is no longer a threat. One shot will kill him, but if you take him out immediately, you'll miss his last words.

Theresa presents you with one final task: you must make a wish. It's not an easy decision to make, but the choices and their consequences are listed here.

Corruption

sacrifice This is the most pure and selfless choice you can make. This will bring back the thousands of lives lost to the Tattered Spire, but it will not net you any wealth, nor will your loved ones (or even your dog!) return to life. You will not be able to complete any remaining quests that require digging, but the public will erect a statue in your honor.

FAMILY: Selecting "Family" brings any of your loved ones who have died—including your dog—back to life. This is still a "good" selection in terms of morality, but it is an impure decision on account of the thousands you are choosing to ignore. That said, you need your dog in order to finish any quests that involve digging and this is the only way to bring him back.

WEALTH: Only the most selfish of Heroes would turn their backs on their own family and thousands of others in favor of riches, but that is the option you have. Selecting "Wealth" will reward you with untold fortunes and the ability to buy whatever you want, whenever you want. But will it buy you respect? However, as with the Sacrifice option, your dog will not be brought back to life, and you will no longer be able to finish any quests that require digging.

CHANGER &

Ranfin

If your quest to upend Lucien's plans has only served to whet your appetite for power, renown, and riches then you have come to the right place. There are plenty of tasks that remain for the Hero craving more of life's offerings, many of which are available to those from either end of the moral spectrum. Now that you have entered a state of older age and have more time to include your interests, consider embarking on the following journeys:

Real Estate Mogul: There are dozens of properties in Albion that you can purchase, including some special properties that, when bought, trigger unique quests (see below). Save up your money and start purchasing as many of these buildings as possible and slowly build an empire worth at least 2.5 million gold!

Side-Quests: One of the ways to continue to build renown and to earn the rights to more titles is to complete the various Archaeologist, Assassination, Bounty Hunter, and Slave Rescue/Civilian Displacement quests. There are 13 Archaeologist quests and a limitless number of randomly generated quests of the other varieties.

Start a Family: You've probably already married at least once or twice, but is the marriage holding steady? If so, set to having children by having as much unprotected sex as you can. Consider expanding your exploits by starting a second family in another town, or by convincing several prostitutes to accompany you back to your house for an orgy. There are several family- and sexrelated Achievements to earn and now is a great time to do so.

Collector: Have you found each and every Gargoyle or Silver Key? Have you unlocked each of the Demon Doors? There are a number of things to collect in Albion, and many more secrets to discover. Scour the land with an area-by-area search with this book's 'Albion Atlas' as your guide to find every hidden chest, dig spot, tomb, and so much more in the game.

True Gamer: Your freedom from the need to search for treasure and slaughter ruthless enemies means that you have more time to enjoy more leisurely pursuits such as gambling, gladiatorial combat, and the ever-popular cardboard shooting range. Or perhaps you simply want to kick back and enjoy the stress-free life of a woodcutter or bartender? Now is a great time to max out your job skills, boost your gambler rating, and win all the prizes at the Shooting Range and Crucible in Westcliff.

Mentor Others: There is arguably no better way to spend your later years in life than by being a mentor for someone much less experienced. Log into Xbox LIVE and offer your wisdom, experience, and talents to the other would-be Heroes in Albion by helping accompany them in their adventures. Though they will surely benefit from your experience and support, remember to let your prospective protégé suffer through their own mistakes and to only offer advice when it is requested.

Your first visit to Nightmare Hollow takes place with you as a child. You're armed with all your current powers and weapons, but you're in the body of an eight year old. Head down the path to the central area and approach the chest in the middle of the clearing. This chest isn't an ordinary chest, it's a special chest that loves to play practical jokes on its "friends" and it now thinks you're its Super Best Friend. You need to follow Chesty through Nightmare Hollow as it disappears and reappears in five different places. Every time you discover its new hiding spot it will summon a wave of enemies as a joke. You'll need to defeat waves of giant beetles, hobbes, hollow men, banshees, and finally balverines. Only after slaughtering all of Chesty's "other friends" will you finally receive Chesty's prized contents:

Get the Portcullis Key from the farmer's bedroom then access the Farm Cellar via the trapdoor in the barn. (If you killed Farmer Giles, then you will find the key in his grave.) Navigate the underground labyrinth with your faithful furry companion and dig up The Enforcer, the legendary blunderbuss!

You'll no doubt notice after completing the Hero of Will quest that you are the target of an increasing number of ambushes. This is because a contract has been taken out on your life and small gangs of highwaymen have flocked to all of the areas where you might be in hopes of being the lucky bunch to bring you down. Of course, you're not aware of this contract at first. It's only after obtaining all four Sketch Fragments that you become aware of the contract, and where the Highwaymen's Guild is based.

This quest will not activate until after you've found the four Sketch Fragments and the only way to do that is by defeating at least four groups of highwaymen attackers while out traveling. Every specific group of highwaymen ambushers holds a Sketch Fragment for this quest. However, several ambushes include highwaymen that aren't associated with a quest. You'll have to roam the areas at Bower Lake, along the path in Bandit Coast, in Brightwood, at Westcliff, and in Rookridge.

It's not going to be easy, but you need to save up 1,000,000 Gold and purchase Castle Fairfax to gain access to the valuable contents within the castle (search the furniture for valuable money bags), not to mention this quest. Purchasing Castle Fairfax is also important for the incredibly valuable sleeping bonuses it gives you when you sleep in Lord Lucien's former bed.

Get Rich Quick

There are many ways to go about earning the riches needed to acquire the castle, but chief among them is maximizing your bartending ability and spending time working at one of the taverns. With a fully-maxed gold multiplier, at a Level 5 salary, you can earn as much as 1125 gold for every beer you pour! Another powerful way to earn money is to equip the Golden Touch augment and head to The Crucible. Slaughter wave after wave of enemies to gain 50 gold per kill. Together with bonuses earned from the crowd, The Crucible can yield plenty of gold in a short amount of time.

Take your time exploring the castle when you first enter it. Use the 50 Silver Keys to unlock the chest in the throne room, shoot the final Gargoyle in the library, and have a good thorough look around. When ready to continue with the quest, head down the eastern hall to the master suite and sleep in the regal bed. The butler will meet you when you wake to inform you of the bandits that are attacking the castle from a secret entrance in Fairfax Tomb.

The first wave attacks in the bedroom shortly after the butler tells you of the ambush. Ready your most powerful inferno spell and release it as soon as the bandits enter the room. Follow the glowing path down the hall to the throne room where the next wave is set to attack. Use a combination of Time Control, Inferno, and Sub-Targeting with either The Enforcer or The Perforator to eliminate the bandits and kill the bandit chief in the library. The butler then reveals the entrance to Fairfax Tomb, where you must go to finish the bandit extermination.

Sub Area

Descend into the secret tomb and pull the right-hand lever in the room ahead to open the gates to each of the small alcoves off the side of the main path. Put down the bandits that attack and take a few moments to follow your dog to the treasure and dig spots in these small side-rooms. Pull the left-hand gate to continue to the large room with the spiraling staircase. Blast your way to the bottom of the room and exit through the doorway opposite the stairs.

Use your Inferno spell and legendary weapons to crush the hobbes in this corner of the tomb and continue to the room with the flit switch. Shoot and slash the flit switch as necessary to unlock the door to the next area. The room with the row of sarcophagi has one of the trickiest flit switches in all of Albion. Hit it with magic, then run to the right and shoot it each time it repositions itself to guide it down from the ledge to where you can hit it at close-range.

It's pretty easy to live a double life, married to two different people, if you have the money to distract the spouses from your perpetual absence. That is, until someone decides to blackmail you! This quest will eventually become active during one of your visits home, after you've maintained two separate marriages for a while. Your spouse will tell you a letter had come from someone, a Blackmail Letter!

Head to Bowerstone Market and meet Kenneth, the blackmailer, under the bridge on the Bower Lake side of the river. If you're going to do the pure thing, you'll refuse to pay off the blackmailer and take whatever punishment and embarrassment you have coming your way. That's the only right thing to do.

Archon's Knot AREA TYPE: TOMB

AREA SYNOPSIS

Archon's Knot is a highly secretive tomb located in the Brightwood region. It is predominantly devoid of enemies, but contains a series of puzzles that will challenge your mind as well as your weaponry. This tomb can only be accessed after your Hero returns from the Spire and leaps off Brightwood Tower into a well that is otherwise out of reach. Ascend Brightwood Tower to the landing where the Cullis Gate is and leap from the tower at the gap in the railing to freefall into the well. Make your way past the spiked floors and locked gates (for which Archon's Knot is known) to exit high on the side of a mountain near a chest containing the Datchi, the single, best melec weapon in Albion!

Untangling the Knot

If you thought finding Archon's Knot was tricky, wait till you see the inside! Archon's Knot consists of several floors and stairs that spiral upwards in a twisted, sideways figure-eight. There's only one way to proceed through the tomb so don't worry about getting lost. Just seek the flit switch on the first floor, then ascend past the spike floors to the Expression Statue on the upper level. Use the Bloodlust Roar expression to satisfy the Expression Statue and follow the caged flit switch upstairs to the next spiked floor. Walk across the spiked panels that the flit switch hovers over to cross the room safely. Continue the ascent and exit the tomb to a ledge in Brightwood.

AREA SYNOPSIS

Known as one of the most dangerous places in all of Albien, the Bandit Coast is the home of ruthless bandits and the even scarier highwaymen.

Only those with a significant need to visit Westcliff would ever dare chance traveling this section of road. Not only is this area heavily patrolled by men of a menacing ilk, but it even houses watchtowers and a fortified camp. Sure, there is plenty of treasure to collect along the fourney-and a small cave to inspect-but you mustn't let your guard down for a single moment in these parts.

AREA TYPE: TOWN

AREA SYNOPSIS

Bloodstone is beyond a doubt the most rough-and-tumble town in Albion. It's a place where pirates and con-men come to live a life of indulgence without the long arm of the law laying its dirty mitts on them. Rumor has it the town's many inhabitants first came to Bloodstone in search of the picturesque seaside views, but then stay for the prostitutes. Bloodstone has nearly everything Bowerstone Market has to offer, minus the upper-class attitudes and prudishness. Make no mistake: Bloodstone is the place to be for the party-going Hero.

This particular Gargoyle is on the wooden support tower for the crane on the south side of the docks.

Position yourself to the left of the stack of crates (with your back to the sea) and look towards the house on the hill to spot the Gargoyle.

1 WINTER LODGE

Reward: Beyond the Demon Door lies a snow-draped path leading to a picturesque cabin tucked deep into the woods. Enter the cabin and go upstairs to find a chest containing the Master Longsword.

The Demon Door on the path leading to Bloodstone from Wraithmarsh is arguably the simplest of all Demon Doors to open. This music-loving demon simply desires to hear someone play the lute for him. Purchase the lute from any number of general goods merchants if you haven't already and return to the Demon Door. Start playing the lute and keep extending the expression until the Demon Door says it's time for the finale, then finish the expression successfully (make sure to stop the needle in the green sweet spot) to gain access to the Winter Lodge.

Bloodstone is a bustling place, filled with some pretty wild characters, but the unfortunate truth is that the economy in this town is rather poor on account of the rampant criminal activity. This makes investing in Bloodstone a wise move on account of the super low prices you're bound to find! Although you won't likely be able to sell any shops or houses for a profit until after running the con-man Toby out of town, this is a small price to pay for what stands to be a considerable increase in prices that follow his removal.

AREA SYNOPSIS

The Bower Lake region is home to the area's massive namesake lake, surrounded by hills and forest on all sides. A band of gypsics makes their home in the hills to the south of the lake, but much of this region is inhabited only by rabbits, giant beetles, and bandits.

A small island in the center of the lake serves as the entrance to the Guild Cave—only those with the Bower Lake Tomb Seal may enter. This isn't the only cave in the area, however. There are three nondescript caves along the southern perimeter of the area that contain chests within—one each. Bower Lake is a unique area in that it contains some semblance of civilized society, thanks to the gypsies, yet the area maintains its rustic charm and wild nature, especially after nightfall...

Bower Lake is a remote area that has been all but left to the woodland creatures. The only permanent encampment is the gypsy camp on the south side of the lake. But, being gypsies, they're content living in caravans that not only have little room for living, but even less for furniture. Pickings are equally slim when it comes to businesses. Two of the three shops are run out of caravans while the other is quite a bit larger. Bowerstone Cemetery is a rather peaceful place, once you come to accept the occasional run-in with the hobbes and hollow men that frequent the darker corners of the area. The cemetery has a large central graveyard, a spookier area near a ghoulish camp of sorts, and also a crypt-lined hill that extends far to the south. There are two separate Expression Statues in this area, as well as a secret underground cave, and a much larger tomb known as Shelley Crypt. Nobody has been tacky enough to open a business inside the confines of the cemetery, but you may encounter the occasional traveling merchant.

3 Market Square, Bowerstone Market

Base Value: 16,000 Gold Owner: Robert the Shopkeeper

There are a lot of shops to purchase in Bowerstone Market and it could be said that owning the Cow & Corset would bring the most bang for your buck. We don't disagree, but the Fiction Burns shop is the only special property in Bowerstone Market and owning it provides certain tangible benefits. For starters, you can gain a significant discount on all of the books in the shop. This can come in handy when looking to acquire the seedier expression manuals. More importantly, owning Fiction Burns allows you to raid the bookshelves in the attic and acquire the Book of Worship, a one-of-a-kind book needed to gain the Completionist Achievement.

Bowlerstone Old Town

AREA SYNOPSIS

Regardless of your choice as a child, you'll barely recognize Bowerstone Old Town when you return to it after your years at the gypsy camp.

Those who decided to give the search warrants to Derek as a child will find their old stomping grounds to be a welcoming, if somewhat snobby, neighborhood filled with manicured lawns, picture-perfect homes, and a satisfying selection of street vendors. You will find none of this if you gave the search warrants to Arfur. Instead you'll find a town not only overrun with criminal activity, but one that is falling apart before if your very eyes. Although you will be able to gain a few "Assassination Society" jobs in Old Town if you give the search warrants to Arfur as a child, this pales in comparison to what you stand to gain if you do the right thing and give them to Derek.

A TALE OF TWO CITIES

The stums version of Old Town lies in stark contrast to the neighboring Bowerstone Market. Everything is dilapidated, there are no guards keeping the peace, and beggars and prostitutes roam the streets while assassins stalk the alleys. A Hero seeking a life of purity will be far from comfortable in this place, but an immoral and corrupt Hero will find it to be a veritable playground. Someone can do a lot of damage when there aren't any guards around to stop them...

Those who gave the warrants to Arfur as a child will find precious little shopping opportunities in the slums that decision has led to. On the other hand, Bowerstone Old Town is the perfect place to come shopping if you received Derek's special 50% discount. The numerous stalls in the beautified version of Old Town have myriad useful items, many of which can go a long way towards keeping you fit, healthy, and attractive. There are huge savings to be made here, so return frequently.

معارف معاركاء

Whether Bowerstone Old Town was transformed into a trendy upscale neighborhood or plummeted into lawless slums only matters as far as the business opportunities are concerned. All the same homes are available—with the same exact base values—regardless the choice you made as a child. The houses are naturally in far better shape and the tenants less likely to shoot you for trespassing in the nicer version of Old Town, but the home values are identical. On the other hand, there is only one shop in the slums and it's a tattoo stand that is quite frankly not worth buying.

SPOTLIGHT HOME

House of Hard Knocks

5 Lookout Way, Bowerstone Old Town

Base Value: 8400 Gold
Owner: Gareth the Househusband
Bonuses: Tough as Nails

This is a fantastic house with a great view and right near a small park, but the real reason to buy this home out of all the houses in Bowerstone Old Town is for the sleeping bonus. Many of the houses in this neck of the woods have some pretty disfiguring side-effects when they sleep in the bed, but the Tough as Nails bonus simply makes you tougher. Whether you want to play moral and pure or as evil as possible, it always helps to wake up feeling a bit tougher in the morning. Plus, this house is right next to the shack you and Rose lived in as children.

SPOTLIGHT BUSINESS

Old Town Weapons

1c Market Walk, Bowerstone Old Town

Base Value: 6500 Gold
Owner: Peter the Stall Vendor

There really isn't much point in owning any of the "good" stalls in Bowerstone Old Town since they don't exist if not for your good deeds early on which therefore has gained you an unbelievable 50% discount. That said, if you are going to buy a business in this beautiful little neighborhood, it may as well be the weapons stall. They have a great selection (that only gets better with time) and you'll generate a fair bit of money as the owner over time.

AREA SYNOPSIS

Brightwood is a heavily forested area filled with rolling hills, a long winding river, numerous ponds, and even a few remote properties. bundits, hobbes, and highwaymen patrol the area seeking to terrorize anyone who dares explore this corner of Albion and chief among their targets is Farmer Giles's family and their farm in the northwest corner of the area. There are several secluded areas that can be accessed from Brightwood, namely the Forsaken Fortress and Archon's Knot.

Legend also has it that there are secrets hidden in the Farm

Cellar too. The maze of trails and undulating topography make

Brightwood a difficult place to get your bearings, so consult the map frequently. You're going to need it.

O GARGOYLES

This Gargoyle is on the ruins near the puddles of water south of the Demon Door.

Swim out to the large island at the southern end of the river and locate the Gargoyle on the side of the tomb.

Shoot through the window at the very top of Brightwood Tower (presumably after purchasing it) to hit the Gargoyle outside.

REAL ESTATE SNAPSHOT

مراجي سيرياء

There are only two pieces of property for sale in Brightwood and, truthfully, you should buy both of them. Giles Farm is far cheaper than Brightwood Tower and contains access to the Farm Cellar which contains the legendary shotgun, the Enforcer. Brightwood Tower is necessary to reach Nightmare Hollow. Save up and buy them both, but don't spend any time looking for shops or stalls to acquire in this neck of the woods as there aren't any. You'll occasionally see a traveling merchant walking along the main road in Brightwood, but that's about it.

SPOTLICHT HOME

Brightwood Tower

Brightwood

Elistony: Built by Stella Malgrave, a Will user of tremendous power, who spent her life researching spells rather than using them. After she perished in the civilian destruction of the Heroes Guild, the tower remained empty thanks to the many magical defense measures she had implemented. Only a Will user of equal abilities would ever be able to make it their home. That person was to be Garth.

Base Value: 250,000 Gold

Owner: Unknown

Bonuses: Health Bonus, Health Regeneration, and Five Minutes of Fame

Both the Giles Farm and Brightwood Tower are important to purchase if you want to truly see everything Albion has to offer, but we recommend Brightwood Tower as the better investment. Sure, this spacious home costs a quarter of a million gold, but not only do you get to access Nightmare Hollow by owning it, taking over Brightwood Tower also eliminates the risk of future invasions by the Spire guards. You won't be able to rent out Brightwood Tower, but its tremendous value will go a long way towards helping you earn the "Ruler of Albion" Achievement.

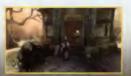

1 THE SEPULCHRE

Reward: Enter the large mausoleum in the center of the area to find a chest containing a Merchant's Cap, Knotted Shirt, and Harlequin Trousers.

At first glance, this seems like an easy Demon Door to satisfy. His initial request is to simply bring him some cheese (any cheese will do), but then he tells you about the special appearance cheese carriers are supposed to have. You must show up with dreadlocks or a mullet and mutton chops or a handlebar moustache. When you return with these styles, he then tells you about the outfit you need to wear. You'll now need to wear a Yokel Hat or Bandit Bandana, Tart Skirt or Noble Trousers, and a Noble Gent's Shirt or Corset. Apparently the Demon Door likes his cheese from hairy, crossdressing types. Assemble the outfit by purchasing the necessary items in Bowerstone Market and in Bloodstone, then stand around in front of the Demon Door patiently as you wait for him to finally open up. The Door is finicky and smart. If you show up wearing any of these items, then it will ask for the item(s) you are not wearing.

AREA SYNOPSIS

Fairfax Gardens is the most luxurious spot in all of Albion. The area-not to mention much of the skyline in Bowerstone-is dominated by the massive Castle Fairfax where you had gone to visit lord lucien so long ago. The eastle has been empty since that night, but that doesn't keep the Bowerstone elite from stroiling the gardens outside the eastle. The sidewalks and lawns of Fairfax Gardens are abuzz with social activity all through the day and you can make a lot of fans here. Numerous traveling merchants make the rounds through this tiny area too, but don't think about attacking them! If there's one thing Fairfax Gardens has more of than powdered wigs, it's security! No place in Albion is more heavily guarded than the pretty pathways located here.

Fairfax Tomb has what is certainly the most difficult flit switch puzzle to complete. Proceed through the tomb to the room with rubble and locate the flit switch on the right. Quickly hit it with a magic spell, then switch to your ranged weapon and shoot it three times as it relocated around the room. You'll have to shoot from the hip as you move across the room, since the flit switch will return to its initial position with any hesitation on your part. It will move much closer to your position after you shoot it a third time. Quickly slash at it with your sword then shoot it again to complete the puzzle.

Depending on the quests you decide to participate in, you may find yourself instructed to visit the Farm Cellar on two different occasions. The first instance would be during Cold Comfort Farmer, but you'll only be able to access the storage area of the cellar at that time. You'll need Giles's Portcullis Key obtained from the dresser in the house in order to unlock the gate leading to the tomb-like portion of the cellar. Lady Grey's Tomb AREA TYPE: TOMB

AREA SYNOPSIS

You might be wondering why anyone in their right mind would want to enter Lady Grey's Tomb, but there is one twisted soul who will ask you to do just that during the "Love Hurts" quest. Lady Grey's tomb is scaled off by gates in the Fairfax Gardens area of Bowerstone until this quest is initiated. The tomb is an certly dark place filled with sand, but it is small and all but impossible to get lost in. However, to even get into the cave you'll be required to open the portcullis and enter the tomb. There may be something even more disturbing to find once you're inside.

Enter the tomb through the mausoleum on the left-hand side of Fairfax Gardens (as viewed while facing Castle Fairfax) and exit on the right.

Lion's Head Isle AREA TYPE: COUNTRYSIDE

AREA SYNOPSIS

Lion's Head Isle is the secret location of Captain Dread's treasure and is only reachable by commandeering the pirate ghost's ship during the "Treasure Island of Doom" quest. The island itself contains a small sandy beach with a shipwreck and a larger interior easis, complete with waterfalls and a small pond. Head up the path from the beach and leap from ledge to ledge on the cliffs to collect the treasure.

AREA SYNOPSIS

Nightmare Hollow is a place nobody ever wants to visit, yet few can resist. If you'd like to see this dreamscape for yourself, all you have to do is purchase Brightwood Tower and sleep in the bed in the attic. Doing so will return you to your childhood and drop you in a mystical forest filled with enemies of all kinds. A treasure chest claiming to be your friend will unleash wave after wave of enemies after you and only by defeating them all will you receive the valuable contents inside. This is all a part of the "Brightwood Tower" quest.

Oakfield AREA TYPE: TOWN

AREA SYNOPSIS

Oakfield is a tranquif farming community set between the picturesque seashore and ferested hills to the east. The villagers are friendly, outgoing, and hard-working. Although there are a few giant beetles in the woods, and a gang of hobbes near the entrance to Echo Mine, 'Oakfield is a peaceful place. Oakfield is known throughout Albien for its spectacular trees and Harvest Festival. The monks at the Temple of Light attribute the region's fertile ground to a single golden acorn that they raise into a towering oak tree every hundred years.

Your actions in the latter stages of your quest for the Hero of Will—before going to the Tattered Spire—will greatly impact this peace-loving town. Those who side with the Temple of Light and protect it from attackers will return to find the Temple expanded (and for sale). Those who ignore the Temple's pleas for help or, worse still, help the Temple of Shadows massacre the people of Oakfield, will return to a place far less inviting. Which path will you choose?

People living in small country towns like Oakfield tend to get by on the bare essentials, and that's what you're going to have to do. Oakfield merchants carry the basic clothes, produce, and weapons that you come to expect but you won't find any bookstores, furniture shops, or potion dealers here. Nor will you find any stylists or tattoo parlors. While you might not be able to get those big-city items here, you will be able to sit down for a nice foamy pint at The Sandgoose. However, while most of these businesses are just stalls, the coach house outside can be quite lucrative.

حاربون سوراء

Would-be property magnates have more buildings to choose from in Oakfield than in many other areas, but the selection is still rather limited. The majority of the country homes in this area are cursed with the Troll Face sleeping bonus which will only appeal to those wishing to scare everyone they meet. The businesses, aside from the Temple of Light and The Sandgoose, are just simple stalls. They provide a nice early-stage investment, but you won't get rich owning them. If profits are your desire, then focus on The Sandgoose, otherwise take your riches to another town or buy up a few of the homes here while they're cheap and rent them out.

Elistog: When Albert the Luminous, founder of the Temple of Light, planted the first Golden Oak, bringing hope and plenty to Oakfield, the residents gave him this house in gratitude. Here he lived till the end of his days. The nearby windmill is part of the property.

Base Value: 4800 Gold Owner: Eli the Farmer Bonuses: Purification

Luminous Cottage provides a nice investment, particularly if you buy it early before it gets redecorated. This is a good place to set as a marital home for those looking to achieve full purity since the sleeping bonus will ensure you gain purity with every snooze. The house is conveniently located—straight down the path from the tavern—and you can often find work as a woodcutter right behind the house. The view of the windmill, the setting moon, and the Tattered Spire make this one of the most picturesque homes in Albion.

For there are many more bonuses to owning the Temple of Light aside from the 925 gold profit you'll be making. Assuming you saved the Temple of Light from falling to the Shadowworshippers, you'll be able to buy this Temple and significantly pad your real estate holdings, while simultaneously earning some morality and the right to be called the Chosen One. Rookridge will be one of the areas you visit most frequently as you travel back and forth across Albion. Situated between Bowerstone Old Town and Oakfield, Rookridge serves as a refuge for those who would rather live outside the reach of law's arm than enjoy the benefits of city life.

The area features a long river canyon that, until a bridge is built, prohibits travel from town to town. The mountains near the waterfalls are home to an old mining camp-now overrun by bandits-and the beaches along the river are home to not one, but two separate caves. Last but not least, Rookridge is home to the Temple of Shadows; Fridays are poker night.

A SILVER KEYS

The first of the Silver Keys in this area is on the promenade near the statue warning of a ghost. Cross the bridge to get it.

Exit Hobbe's Cave and run around to the back of the cabin where you emerge. The Silver Key is on the deck behind the house.

This Silver Key is on the end of the mine car bridge, east of the abandoned Rookridge Inn.

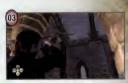

GARGOYLES

This Gargoyle is on the cliffs to the right of the entrance to Hobbe Cave. It may well be the first Gargoyle you shoot.

Come back to Rookridge after returning from the Tattered Spire and climb the path to the mineshaft at the end of the rail track.

Gain access to the Temple of Shadows and cross the entrance courtyard to the far right-hand corner to find this Gargoyle on the wall.

The Temple of Shadows

AREA SYNOPSIS

Unlike the Temple of Light in Oakfield, the Temple of Shadows is its own separate entity and one that you have to be initiated into, at least at first. There are two ways to go about gaining access to the Temple of Shadows. One way is to complete the initiation ritual of eating five Crunchy Chicks during the Adolescence phase of life. The other option is to return during Adulthood and walk right in. You may think this is the morally right path to walk, but that all depends on whether or not you allowed the Shadow-worshippers to slaughter the monks at the Wellspring Cave. Either way, those looking to pledge their allegiance to the Temple of Shadows should start early. Cornelius Grim has several diabelical tasks in store for those with the stomach to take them on.

AREA SYNOPSIS

Wellspring Cave is a place held sacred to the order of monks at the Temple of Light. It is believed that the water flowing through the springs and fountains in this cave hold mystical properties and are the only water of a high enough quality to be fed to the Golden Oak. You'll make the fourney into this cave as part of an escort assignment during "The Ritual" quest. There is only one piece of treasure in this cave—a Silver Key—and you can get it during your initial visit.

RETURN VISIT?

Whether you choose to return to Wellspring Cave during the shadowworshipper's assault is up to you, but do know that failure to heed the call will result in a very different place when you return from the Tattered Spire. Wellspring Cave is an extension of the Temple of Light and those seeking a life of morality will want to protect it.

AREA SYNOPSIS

The Westeliff region is one of the most diverse in Albion and its unique regional disparities only exaggerate with time. The area south of the river and closest to the Bandit Coast is a wild, inhospitable land and home to many balverines. Across the river, however, near the ocean to the north lies Westeliff Camp, lies a small settlement of bandits with a few shops and games, as well as the infamous Crucible arena. Those who lend 5000 Gold to Barnum before leaving for the Tattered Spire will return to find Westeliff a bustling tourist town with major improvements throughout the area-even a new bridge across the river canyon!

DEMON DOOR

1 THE VAULT

Reward: The Vault is one of the smallest Demon Door areas and in it is just a single chest containing the Calavera, the legendary mace! This is one of the easiest Demon Doors to unlock and one you should definitely aim to do prior to going to The Crucible.

This particular Demon Door is located in the southern section of Westcliff. You'll likely pass it on your way to the Howling Halls. This Demon Door is a fan of all things hedonistic and it only opens to those who have showed to travel a path of self-indulgence. Embark on a life of corrupt behavior and tilt the purity needle at least halfway in favor of corruption to satisfy this Demon Door's requirement. Don't worry; there's still plenty of time to regain your purity.

All the shopping in Westcliff is confined to a short merchant street in Westcliff Camp, outside The Crucible. Although you'll be able to buy a few essential items during your first trip to Westcliff, it's not until you return from the Tattered Spire when the town really starts to grow. The 5000 gold you leant Barnum (you did lend it to him, right?) has helped transform the town's economy and now full-scale operations like the Westcliff General Store and The Foaming Jugs are thriving.

Unlike other towns with a number of established businesses to purchase, Westcliff is lacking in suitable home sites. There are a number of caravans (after the Westcliff Development quest) grouped together outside the business section of Westcliff Camp, but that is all. In contrast, the numerous merchant stalls, blacksmith shop, Westcliff General Store, and The Foaming Jugs tavern offer plenty of investment options for Heroes with varying amounts of gold.

Bonuses:

There are plenty of choices for home buying in Westcliff. You can buy this caravan or you can have that caravan. Or perhaps you prefer that other caravan. They're all the same: same looks, same costs, and the same lack of a sleeping bonus. If you're going to purchase any of these, try to do it right after coming back from the Tattered Spire so that you can at least maximize the amount of time you'll be pulling in that seven gold coins in rent.

SPOTLIGHT BUSINESS

The Foaming Jugs

1 Crucible Walk, Westcliff

Base Value: 36,000 Gold
Owner: Martin the Barman

Aside from the blacksmith's shop and the Westcliff General Store, The Foaming Jugs is the only place in Westcliff of any significant value and is definitely the tavern to invest in Albion. The people in Westcliff are a mixture of rough-and-tumble types as well as some of the more well-heeled travelers from fancier parts. The one thing they have in common is that they're here to party—and the spacious brothel located upstairs doesn't hurt either!

AREA TYPE: COUNTRYSIDE

AREA SYNOPSIS

Wraithmarsh is the undeniable epicenter of all things spooky in Albion. This swampland isn't just crawling with hollow men and banshees.

but it also contains some of the largest tombs in the region-tombs filled with ghosts and yet even more hollow men. Despite the onslaught of banshee attacks and even the presence of a troll, no part of Wraithmarsh can frighten like a trip through the old Oakvale neighborhood.

Oakvale has a special, if not infamous, place in the history of Albion and seeing the mist-shrouded swamp consume it is sobering. As is the evidence of what one man's greed could do to a village.

Reward: Travel through the Demon Door to the home of a scared little boy who built hundreds of statues to protect him while he slept. Go to the cave behind the house and slash your way through the rows of statues to find The Perforator, another legendary weapon!

The Demon Door in the northeast corner of Wraithmarsh is yet another fan of theatre, only this one wants to be the actor. He is tired of performing for small, undeserving crowds and wants you to assemble a large crowd of intelligent, upper class (or at least middle class) people to listen to his reading. You'll need to have achieved enough renown in order to have increased number of followers at once. We recommend heading to Fairfax Gardens or the Cow & Corset in Bowerstone Market and gathering up ten followers. This way you'll be sure to have at least the number of intellectuals he's looking for. Now stand and listen to his drivel and remember that there's an impressive weapon in it for you. Just grin and bear it.

Enemies of Albion

Melee weapons come in different shapes and sizes, but all serve the same purpose: bashing and slashing enemies an arm's length away. Although melee weapons are useless against distant foes, they are extremely handy when standing face-to-ugly-face with an enemy. Weapons of this type come in different shapes and sizes. Generally, the larger the melee weapon is, the more damage it will inflict but the slower it can be swung. These larger, more cumbersome weapons (axes, hammers, and maces) are perfect for use against isolated, large enemies. On the other hand, the smaller blades (cutlasses and katanas) can be swung blazingly quick and are perfect for swarms of low-level enemies. Naturally, there are also several all-purpose melee weapons that blend power with attack speed.

MELEE WEAPON EXPLANATION

- 1 NAME: This is the name of the weapon. Most weapons have a descriptive name that indicates their quality (Rusty < Iron < Steel < Master), but special weapons have unique names.
- 3 TARS: Every item has a star value. This is your guide to the relative rarity and value of a particular weapon or item. The more stars, the more valuable it is.
- [3] IMAGE: This shows you what the weapon looks like so you can imagine it hanging off your Hero's back. Weapons as accessories, who knew?
- 4 DAMAGE: The amount of health a single attack from this weapon will inflict before modifiers are applied.
- TYPE: Some weapons inflict cutting damage while others inflict blunt damage. Both hurt a great deal; one is just messier than the other.
- 6 ATTACK SPEED: This tells you how fast you can swing a weapon repeatedly. Heavy weapons are slower than smaller, lighter weapons.
- BASE VALUE: The fair market amount (in gold) that the weapon is worth with zero augment slots. The weapon will be bought or sold for a different value depending on various economics of the merchant, as well as how many augment slots it has. Weapons with augment slots may cost significantly more.
- 8 AUGMENT &LOT&: Each of the standard weapons comes in a form with a different number of augment slots ranging from zero to four.
 Weapons with customizable augment slots only range from zero to two. Augments are special stones that can be applied to a weapon to infuse it with special powers. See the full assortment of augments in the "Items and Collectibles" chapter.

Enemies of Albion

There are many types of ranged weaponry, but every last one of them can be used to damage an enemy standing too far away to hit with a melee weapon. Ranged weapons are great for taking down enemies flying out of reach of your sword, or for those positioned on a cliff or across a broken bridge. The different types of ranged weapons each have their own unique pros and cons, namely how fast they can be reloaded, their ammo capacity, the damage they inflict, and their effective range. As you might expect, the weapons that can inflict the most damage at the farthest range also typically have the slowest reload times and carry the least ammo. Other weapons have faster reload times, but inflict less damage or carry less ammunition. Which you choose to use depends as much on your own personal preference as it will the augments with which you equip the weapon.

RANGED WEAPON EXPLANATION

- 1 NAME: This is the name of the weapon. Most weapons have a descriptive name that indicates their quality (Rusty < Iron < Steel < Master), but special weapons have unique names. Crossbows have a different set of descriptors, but are just as easy to decipher (Splintered < Yew < Oak < Master).
- 2) STARS: Every item has a star value. This is your guide to the relative rarity and value of a particular weapon or item. The more stars, the more valuable it is.
- [3] IMAGE: This shows you what the weapon looks like so you can image it hanging off your Hero's back.
- DAMAGE: The amount of health a single attack from this weapon will inflict before modifiers.
- TYPE: This is the type of projectile the weapon fires. Most of these weapons are firearms that shoot bullets, but the crossbows shoot bolts.
- 6 ATTACK SPEED: This tells you how fast the weapon can be fired. This rating really only applies to those weapons with an ammo capacity greater than 1 since all other weapons must be reloaded after being fired.
- 7 AMMO CAPACITY: How many arrows or bullets the weapon can hold at once. Weapons with increased ammo capacity can be fired repeatedly
- (8) RELOAD TIME: How long it takes to reload the weapon. Weapons with higher ammo capacities generally take longer. Times of 1 second or less are favorable.
- RANGE: How far the weapon's projectile travels. The greater this number, the farther away you can be from your target and still fire the weapon effectively.
- BASE VALUE: The fair market amount (in gold) that the weapon is worth with zero augment slots. The weapon will be bought or sold for a different value depending on various economics of the merchant, as well as how many augment slots it has. Weapons with augment slots may cost significantly more.
- 11) AUGMENT &LOT&: Each of the standard weapons comes in a form with a different number of augment slots ranging from zero to four. Weapons with customizable augment slots only range from zero to two. Augments are special stones that can be applied to a weapon to infuse it with special powers. Books & Documents

There are a significant number of texts contained in the world of Albion, but only the Expression Manuals and the books on dog training are of any real significance to the Hero's development. These items are often found contained within chests, inside dig spots, and elsewhere. Many of the other books and documents can be found by snooping around people's homes or by purchasing them from stores. Some of these may prove valuable to people in other towns; a skilled trader may make a few gold coins from selling them. Do note that there are many other texts of interest that relate to the story.

As great as Heroes are portrayed, they aren't really all that different from normal folk. They bleed when cut, they tire after long journeys, and they get fat if they drink too much beer. Food and drink plays a big role in Fable II, particularly after battles. Heroes can consume various meals and beverages to regain health, to increase their experience, and to even affect their attractiveness. All food isn't created equal however. Greasy, fattening foods of low quality not only offer little nutritional benefit, but they also decrease the Hero's purity rating which can adversely affect their appearance. On the other hand, maintaining a diet of vegetables, fruit, non-alcoholic drinks, and tofu will not only keep you slender, but can even provide a boost to the Hero's morality and purity ratings.

- Name: This is the name of the food or beverage. These names often provide a pretty clear indication to the quality of the food.
 - Stars: Every item has a star value.
 This is your guide to the relative rarity and value of a particular food or drink.
 The more stars the food has, the more likely it is to be healthy for you.
 - Image: This shows you what the food looks like so you can better imagine having to eat it yourself.
- Healing Pts: The amount of health consuming this food or drink will replenish.
- Morality: The Hero who eats tofu will enjoy an increase in morality. At least they'll enjoy something...
 - Purity: The food you eat and the drinks you imbibe say a lot about you as a Hero. Eat foods high in purity if you care at all about the way others view you.

- Fatness: The unfortunate reality in Albion is that eating healthily doesn't come cheaply. The cheaper foods often replenish little health and come with a high fatness rating. Stay clear of the fatty foods (desserts and beer, specifically) if you're watching your waistline.

Potions aren't as easily found as food and drinks and can cost thousands more, but they come with none of the adverse side-effects. The Hero who relies on a strict potion diet can say goodbye to being fat and ugly without having to ever punish their taste buds with the righteous diet of tofu and carrots.

- Name. This is the name of the potion. These names often provide a pretty clear indication to the benefits.

Although we expect some Heroes to indeed choose a life of celibacy (and loneliness), most will eventually want to settle down and start a family-or at least get some nookie. That's where gifts come into play. The best way to make someone like you is to give them gifts of their liking. Check their list of likes and dislikes and try to give them a gift that matches their interests. After all, the gift you give a barmaid should be different than the ones you give your children. Don't just give any gift to anyone without first thinking about the result. Each gift has the capacity to increase/decrease their feelings about you so choose wisely. The gift you give can be one of friendliness, childishness, poshness, or romance. Naturally, gifts with higher poshness and romance ratings will go a long way towards helping you find a mate.

TOYS

You won't have much need for these gifts until you have a family (or two), but it's always a good idea to keep the kids happy once you do. Your adventuring will likely take you away from home for several days at a spell. Bring the kids home some toys to make up for all the times they have to tuck themselves into bed at night, wondering when they'll ever see you again.

FLOWERS, PERFUME & CANDY

Regardless of your gender or sexual orientation, the object of your lustful desires will no doubt appreciate a gift of this variety. After all, everyone likes getting flowers and candy! Best of all, even the cheaper gifts—the ones with the negative poshness ratings—pack a hefty romantic punch. Save the candy for those you wish to befriend and give out the flowers and perfume to those you wish to bed.

Nothing says forever like a Forever Ring. Jewelry shouldn't be given out to just anyone. Hold onto any rings you get so you can use them to get engaged and continue to collect jewelry to give to your spouse(s) when you come home from a long quest. You'll be happy to know that even the cheapest of jewelry gets the romantic juices flowing. Save your money and refrain from buying the most expensive items unless your spouse is about to leave you or, worse, your mistress is.

The augments listed here can be installed into any weapon with an empty augment slot to give it a powerful boost in power. Augments are pretty rare in the wild, but they can be purchased from stone cutters around Albion. These magical gems can provide some extremely helpful upgrades to your weaponry, but many also come with a rather nasty side-effect. Be sure to understand the effects of the augment well before installing it into a weapon. Experiment with combining different augments in the same weapon to stack their powers.

Everyone wants a roof over their head, but they prefer there to be some beds, chairs, and tables under that roof with them. Give your family the comforts they deserve by outfitting your home with any of these lines of furniture. Hold off on buying a home and starting a family until you can at least afford furniture from the "average" line, else you're bound to hear them complaining about the squalor you force them to live in. You can replace the furniture in a home you own by accessing the real estate sign and selecting "Redecorate" mode. Now all of the exchangeable furniture can be targeted and swapped with pieces from your inventory.

Clothing

There are plenty of quality tailors scattered throughout the cities of Albion and each of them are capable of crafting some fine, handmade clothing. Outfit your Hero any way you see fit, but keep in mind that these choices will go a long way towards impacting the first impression others form of you. Dress in a way that matches your desired outcome on the morality scale, as this will certainly affect your progress in that area. Note that all clothes can be worn by both males and females. Many items are unisex, but those that are designed specifically for one sex carry a cross-dressing rating should the other sex wear them. Heroes wishing to experiment with gender play should consider wearing clothes of the opposite sex, especially if looking to start a same-sex relationship.

BANDIT

Nobody knows where bandits buy their clothes, but they probably stitch and sew them themselves, when no one's looking.

CHICKEN SUIT

Transform yourself into what you've always wanted to become. Stand in front of the mirror, and ask yourself: "Would you chase me? I'd chase me. I'd chase me hard."

FEMALE GYPSY

Want to fit in at the Bower Lake camp?

BOOR-ZHWAH

Become a part of Albion's bourgeoisie, a place from which you can look upon the lower classes with disdain and the upper classes with ervy.

EXPLORER

The intrepid explorers who have ventured beyond the lands of Albion have traditionally favored this outfit. Nobody knows how useful it is to the trade, since few of them come

FEMALE UPPER CLASS

Being a fancy lady, you're too posh to wear anything but the best. This outfit marks you out as one of Albion's elite. In the gold-stakes if nothing else.

MALE GYPSY

The perfect outfit for those who have a sky for a blanket and the earth for their bed.

RANGER

Seldom seen these days, Rangers are at home in the woods, wrestling trees and snuggling up to weeds and rocks.

HAL'S OUTFIT

This "Halo" themed outfit is available only to owners of the Collector's Edition of "Fable 2".

Long ago, when Albion was still under rule of the Old Kingdom, a rift in space opened a portal between dimensions. Through the rift stepped a warrior of immense power, clad in green armor and carrying a striking crystal sword. Though he never revealed his real name, he was known to all as Hal.

MALE LOWER CLASS

Mingle with the rabble with this cheap slumdweller outfit.

SHADOW-WORSHIPPER

The posh twits at the Temple of Shadows may only be playing at being evil, but the aura of malice this outfit emanates is unmistakable.

HARLOT

You too can join the oldest profession in the world. Yes, older even than puppeteering.

MALE MIDDLE CLASS

Become a part of Albion's bourgeoisie, a place from which you can look upon the lower classes with disdain and the upper classes with envy.

SPIRE GUARD

Want to be a member of Lucien's army? This outfit is ideal for both guarding prisoners in the Spire and razing town's in Lucien's name across Albion.

HIGHWAYMAN OUTFIT

The Highwaymen's Guild is very selective about who becomes a member. But who needs membership when you can dress up like them?

MALE UPPER CLASS

You're too posh to wear anything but the best. This outfit marks you out as one of Albion's elite. In the gold-stakes if nothing else.

WILL USER

Don't allow non-Will-conducive clothes to cramp your magical style, this outfit is the choice of all serious spellcasters.

HOT DATE

Sexy and enticing, or a horrifying abomination? Put it on and decide for yourself.

MONK

It's no wonder the soft robes of this outfit are favored by the monks from the Temple of Light.

WIZARD

This wizard robe and hat allows the right wearer to cast Lvl. 3 Eroticism.

As a gambler in the world of Albion, you earn a star rating based on how much gambling you do. You earn one point for each gold piece that you bet, and you increase in star levels based on your total points earned. These star levels unlock bigger games, and also allow you to borrow money in larger blocks.

You begin your gambling career with a rating of one star, and access to only the lowest-limit games. At 3000 points, you are promoted to

Level	Points Required	Credit Limit
*	0	400
	3000	800
	15,000	1500
	75,000	2500
*	300,000	4000

the two-star level and so forth. Your Credit Limit represents the largest block of money that you can borrow at once. You actually have unlimited credit, so you can borrow this amount again and again. Also, if you have plenty of gold on hand, your credit limit is always equal to your total gold, or your level-based limit, whichever is greater.

Fortune's Tower Merchant Directory

Fortune's Tower is a press-your-luck style card game that is a mix of the classic games of Solitaire and Blackjack. Of the three different Pub Games, Fortune's Tower contains the largest element of strategy and gives the player the most control over winning and losing. It's important to always consider how many Hero Cards are still remaining, and most importantly, whether or not the Gate Card is still in play. Knowing when to cash out is where the strategy comes in.

Pules

- A game of pressing your luck, played with a deck of cards ranked from 1 through 7 plus four 'Hero' cards.
- Decks contain 8, 9, or even 10 sets of each numbered card plus the four Heroes.
- Bets must be a multiple of 15 gold. Use the Left Thumbstick to increase or decrease your initial bet.
- The dealer begins the game by dealing three cards. The first is face down and is called the 'Gate Card.' The next two are face up and placed in a second row. There can be as many as eight rows if you reach the bottom of the tower.
- After each row is dealt you can either take the dealer's offer (equal to the total value of cards in the row) or you can choose to have another row dealt.
- Vertical pairs can end your game, so you don't want to see cards of the same rank touching one another from different rows (in contrast, horizontal pairs are a pleasant sight, as it reduces the chance of a vertical pair).
- The first time you draw a vertical pair, the dealer will replace the lower card within the pair with the Gate Card, thereby saving your game.
 A second vertical pair ends the game and you won't receive any gold.
- Hero cards aren't worth any gold since they have no face value, but their presence protects the entire row from misfortune. Drawing a Hero card not only protects against vertical pairs, but even keeps your Gate Card safe.
- Press the A Button to push on and have the dealer deal another row or press the B Button to cash out and take the dealer's offer.
- When an entire row matches, this is called a 'set.' A set gives a bonus multiplier equal to the row number with which it takes place.

 This multiplier remains in play until Misfortune is caused or you cash out. Multipliers can go as high as x8.
- Finish row eight without busting or using the Gate Card to win the jackpot. The jackpot pays the value of every card on the table, times any multipliers you may have.
- Each table has its own unique betting limit. Increase your bet in multiples of 15 to win even more gold. For example, betting 60 gold earns you 4x the gold you'd win by betting just 15 gold.

The term "Misfortune" simply refers to losing at Fortune's Tower before you had a chance to cash out. This happens whenever you have one or more vertical pairs and no Gate Card or Hero Card to save you from defeat.

Variants and Odds

All Fortune's Tower games play by the same rules. However, there are three different decks, known as the Ruby, Emerald, and Diamond decks. The difference in the decks is the quantity of the number cards. Since Hero cards are the best cards for the player, having proportionally fewer of these cards makes the Ruby and Emerald decks slightly worse for the player than the Diamond deck.

Ruby Decks: Contain 4 Heroes and 70 number cards.

Emerald Decks: Contain 4 Heroes and 63 number cards.

Diamond Decks: Contain 4 Heroes and 56 number cards.

With basic strategy (described below) players can expect the following approximate returns in the long run: Ruby deck (92%), Emerald deck (93.3%), and Diamond deck (99.4%).

Basic Strategy

Since Fortune's Tower is a press-your-luck game, you are essentially making a new bet on each round. You are risking the value of the row (which you could take right now) in exchange for the expected value of the next row, which might be better or worse.

Enemies of Albion

Despite this complexity, there is a simple strategy table for Fortune's Tower, which gives you the correct play most of the time. This table is based on two factors: the Gate card, and the value of the row.

To use these tables, simply look at the unmodified offer value (that is, the raw total of the values in the row, applying no multipliers). If that value is equal to or higher than the value on the table, you should take the dealer's offer; otherwise, you should push on. The first column under each deck represents the minimum cashout value if your Gate card is intact; the second, lower value is the minimum value if the Gate card has been used.

	RUBY DECK
Row	Gate Card Intact	Used Gate Card
2	12+	-
3	15+	9+
4	17+	9+
5	22+	11+
6	33+	11+
7	Never	12+
8	Always	Always

EMERALD DECK
Row	Gate Card Intact	Used Gate Card
2	12+	-
3	15+	9+
4	18+	10+
5	24+	11+
6	35+	12+
7	Never	13+
8	Always	Always

	DIAMOND DECK
Row	Gate Card Intact	Used Gate Card
2	13+	-
3	16+	9+
4	20+	10+
5	26+	11+
6	38+	13+
7	Never	14+
0	Alumin	Aluenus

For example, in the Ruby deck, you should cash out on Row 2 if the cards total 12 points or more. If you still have your Gate card on row 5, you should cash out with 22 or more. Notice that if your Gate card is intact on Row 7, you should always go for the Jackpot.

Again, these numbers are compared to the raw total value of the row, before you apply any modifiers for a larger bet, or for a bonus multiplier. It may seem tempting to behave differently when, for example, you have a 3x multiplier. However, that multiplier applies to all rows. This means that you are risking three times as much to win three times as much, so the correct play remains the same.

You will notice that there are many times where the best move is to cash out for less than you paid. Once your Gate Card is gone, the risk of misfortune is often too high to stick around.

ADVANCED STRATEGY

The basic strategy tables do not take into account any of the cards in play, only the raw total of the current row. You can use this extra information to improve your play. In fact, with perfect play on the Diamond deck, you may even have a slight edge over the house.

One of the interesting things about Fortune's Tower is that you can "count cards" just by looking at what's in play. Your decision to stay in the game or cash out can be informed by what's already been dealt.

Enemies of Albion

Keystone is a dice game that combines the betting strategies of Craps with the luck of Roulette. The object of the game is to place bets based on the numbers you expect to be rolled with the three dice before the Arch collapses. The Arch collapses if either 3 or 18 are removed or once both 10 and 11 have been rolled. With each roll of the dice another stone from the Arch is removed and it gets that much closer to collapsing. If a stone on the Arch has already been removed, then the one nearest it on the downward slope of the Arch is removed. Players place bets on the Arch (outside bets) that last for the entire length of the game and can also place inside bets which are one-roll only.

Rules

- A series of wagers are placed on the roll of three dice. Bet on single numbers, sets of numbers, or long strings of rolls.
- The outer arch contains 16 stones (3 through 18), one for each possible roll. Arch stones are removed one by one as the game proceeds.
- If the same number is rolled again, a lower Arch stone will be removed. The word 'lower' refers to the stones physically lower on the arch than that of the number rolled. The arrows under the Arch stones point in the direction of the stones that will be removed with repeat rolls.
- The game ends when the Arch collapses. This happens as soon as either of the 'Base' stones are removed (3 or 18) or if both of the Keystones (10 and 11) are removed. An average game lasts eight rounds.
- Playing Arch bets is a wager placed on one of the Arch stones. You are betting that the particular stone will be removed before the game ends.

 Arch bets can only be placed at the beginning of the game, and you must make at least one in order to start.
- Inside bets are single round bets. Different wagers have different odds, such as 8:10. In each case, the number on the right side shows how much you must bet, and the number on the left shows how much additional gold you will win if your wager is successful. We say "additional" because a winning bet also returns your initial outlay.
- Hold Left Trigger to see an odds overlay for the entire Keystone board. Note that betting on a specific three-of-a-kind bet, also known as a "hardways" bet in gambling parlance, pays off 400:2. This means that a single bet of 2 gold will return 402 gold (including your initial bet).
- The second number in each odds bet tells you the minimum bet for that space. You must always bet in multiples of the minimum bet. For example, 2 for inside bets or 5 for Arch bets.
- Trips means any three of a kind, a Pair means any two of a kind, and Run means a sequence such as 2-3-4 or 4-5-6. A bet on the Keystone space covers both 10 and 11 together.
- You can also bet black or red and diamond or circle, but note that 3, 10, 11, and 18 are neutral and yield a losing bet even if you cover all four of these squares.
- When applicable, a Jackpot rule allows players to be automatically paid on all Arch bets if the first roll, the "come out roll", is a 3 or 18. After the first roll, rolling a 3 or 18 still ends the game, but they won't cause a Jackpot. In a Jackpot game, all inside bets pay out normally, including bets on the first roll.
- Bloodstone is essentially the backwards version of Keystone in which you bet against the roll of the dice. Most bets will usually win a little, but they can sometimes lose a lot.
- Bloodstone bets are made with an oversized chip called a "lammer" which marks every space that you think the dice will not roll. You don't bet with chips because you'd need too many. Most bets will usually win.

Variants and Odds

Keystone has three major variants: Standard, Jackpot, and Bloodstone. In Standard Keystone all the normal Keystone rules apply. In Jackpot Keystone, there is an additional rule: if the first roll of the game is a 3 or an 18, then all Arch bets are instant winners. Bloodstone is quite different; it is essentially the basic game in reverse.

Standard: No Jackpot rule is in effect; bet on stones you expect to be rolled.

Jackpot: Pays all Arch bets if a 3 or 18 are rolled on first roll. Jackpots are very rare.

Bloodstone: Reverse Keystone that requires you to place lamers on numbers you don't think will be rolled. Can win a little, but stand to lose a lot.

The payouts for each bet in Keystone are based on the likelihood of that event happening. You can compute the house advantage on any bet by comparing the true odds to the actual payout of the table. For example, the odds of rolling any trips (three of a kind) are 6 in 216: there is exactly one way to roll each three of a kind, out of a total of 216 possible rolls. This reduces to 1 roll in 36, which (if the game had no house advantage) should pay 35:1. A typical Keystone table pays 34:1 for this bet, which means that for every 36 gold the house should return to you, it gives you only 35. The payback on this bet is therefore 35/36, or 97.22%. Odds on the Keystone bets vary between bets, and from table to table. For any one-roll bet, you can compute the correct odds and house percentage as described above.

Finemies of Albion

For the multi-roll bets, you need to know the odds of a particular stone being cleared (paid) before the end of the game, which are as follows:

ARCH BET ODDS BY GAME TYPE
Arch Bet	Odds to Clear (Standard)	Odds to Clear (Jackpot)
3 or 18	21.4%	21.9%
4 or 17	31.7%	32.6%
5 or 16	42.9%	43.9%
6 or 15	52.8%	53.7%
7 or 14	60.3%	61.2%
8 or 13	64.7%	65.6%
9 or 12	63.8%	64.7%
10 or 11	74.4%	75.3%

Bloodstone uses similar odds calculations. For example, on the Trips bet, the odds of winning are 210 in 216 (all but the 6 ways to roll trips), which reduces to 35 in 36. If the bet pays 10/360, then on average you will collect 10 gold 35 times, and lose 360 gold once. The value of this bet is therefore 350/360, which is the same 97.22% we calculated above. The main difference is that in Bloodstone you are "laying odds" on this bet, meaning that you will usually win a little but sometimes lose a lot. In Keystone, the opposite is true: on the Trips bet you sometimes win a lot, but usually lose a little.

Basic Strategy

There is no single strategy that will consistently win or lose in Keystone, other than to stick to the individual bets with the lowest house percentage. However, there are some betting patterns that can be fun to play.

For example, you can choose to play the "High Game" or "Low Game," betting on all Arch stones on the left or right side of the arch. If you feel like a run of low rolls is coming, bet the entire low end and see how many you can eliminate before the end of the game.

A bet of three units on Pair, two units on Run, and one unit on Trips, is a fun set of bets. You will lose all six units less than half the time, roughly 44% of the rolls. You will get your money back when you hit the pair (or a little more, depending on the table), roughly 41% of the time. Trips will hit on one roll in 36, paying roughly six times your total bet, and a Run will hit roughly 11% of the time, paying roughly three times your total bet. The payback percentage on this set of bets is 96.2%.

In Bloodstone, you want to make a lot of bets so that one bad roll won't necessarily cripple you. One fun set of bets is to cover all the even or odd numbers in the middle of the arch (for example, 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14). This way, you win all five bets on any odd roll, or on one of the long-shot even rolls (4, 16 and 18), and you lose a reasonable amount (at most, 22 bets) if one of your numbers hits.

Spinnerbox is a rather unique take on the popular slot machines seen in today's casinos. Just like the real thing, your input is limited to deciding how much to bet and then pressing the A Button to spin the flit switches. What happens after that is up to chance. There is probably no faster way to burn through your hard-earned money than by playing Spinnerbox, as you can play a round in as little as 5 seconds if you continue to press A Button quickly. Of course, if you're lucky, then this also means that there's no faster way to get rich!

The goal of Spinnerbox is to get a chain of matching-and touching-symbols. Some spinner boxes contain just three switches while others have four or even six. There are bonuses involved in each of the games, but scoring large payouts on the bigger boards is definitely less common than on the smallest board. Regardless the board you decide to play on, be sure to watch your money closely as it can disappear mighty quick playing this game.

Rules

- A spinner box is a decorative box containing several devices called 'flit switches.' A flit switch is a magical spinner that will randomly cycle through a variety of symbols. To play Spinnerbox, just place your bet and spin!
- A 'chain' is two or more adjacent symbols of the same type. When a chain appears, you'll win an amount of gold based on which symbols you get, and how much you bet.
- Some spinner boxes have three switches, some have four, and some have six. Bigger boxes mean better chains, as many as six of a kind!
- Some spinner boxes have symbols that enhance the game instead of simply paying out gold. These are called 'Bonus' symbols. On Cow and Corset, for example, when you get a chain of three bonus symbols, a fourth switch appears in the middle of the box. Whichever symbol appears on this single switch pays out as if it was three of a kind.
- On four-switch spinner boxes, every Coins symbol will earn you a free spin. You earn free spins whenever you get a chain of two or more Coins symbols. You can even earn more free spins while playing your original free spins.
- On Flower Garden, Crowns give you a payout multiplier, which applies to your next spin. Your multiplier grows with each Crown that appears, and keeps growing for as long as they keep popping up. The multiplier will reset if a spin produces no Crowns.
- Hold the Left Trigger to see a list of all payouts and bonus game rules for any spinner box. To see what different starting bets might pay, you can even change your wager while looking at this list.

Variants and Odds

The different Spinnerbox varieties become available as you continue to travel around Albion, raise your gambler rating, and encounter different Game Masters. There is no denying that you stand to win a lot of money while playing the games with more flit switches, but the occurrence of a three-of-a-kind on the three switch boards is too frequent to be ignored. Consider sticking to the simple version and bet the maximum every round. The fourth flit switch bonus will pay off huge!

Three Switch: Simple three switch spinner box with a bonus fourth switch that appears on three of a kind.

Four Switch: Four switches with Coins symbols mixed in to reward you with free spins.

Six Switch: A six-switch spinner box with Crown symbols that provide a winnings multiplier for your following spin.

As with a real slot machine, each spin is independent of the others, so you are equally likely to hit a jackpot on the next spin, whether your last spin was a winner or not. These games can be extremely volatile. That means that, in the short term, you can have wildly different results. In general, the higher the top award in a given machine, the higher the volatility of that machine, and the longer you would have to play it to come close to the expected payback. In the short term, this could mean big wins or big losses.

In the Fable II Pub Games for XBLA, you will find house-sponsored tournaments that have a built-in advantage for the player. In each tournament, the house adds additional money (and prizes) to the prize pool, making the tournament a long-term winning proposition. The hitch is that to sunlock the high-level tournaments, you need to put in some time playing in the cash games, and raising your star rating.

In both the Fortune's Tower and Keystone tournaments, money management is as important as basic strategy. Notice where other players stand in the tournament (you can view all relevant stats by holding the Right Trigger). If you are in the lead, you may want to bet conservatively. If you are far behind, you need to play more aggressively. When a small win won't make the difference, you need to set yourself up for a big one. In the Spinnerbox tournament, there's no option to vary your bet, so the only winning strategy is try, try again!

To make the most gold over time, you should unlock the highest level tournaments. It's slow going, but the odds are in your favor. If you want the chance to make gold more quickly, try your luck at the high-limit cash games, but be prepared for big swings up and down!

Rortune's Power Pournaments

This is a "shootout" tournament. First, you play 12 hands against four A.I. opponents, and the winner of the round (the player with the most chips) moves on to a final table. At the final table, all players' chips are reset, and all five players at this table will win a cash prize. To succeed in this format, you must do whatever it takes to win first place on the first table, and then you can focus on placing as high as possible at the second.

3	80	4000	Highroller's Coat
4	200	9000	Potion of Will
5	500	18500	Championship Pistol

Cut Your Losses

The key to winning in Fortune's Tower tournaments is to manage your money as conservatively as possible and avoid the temptation to go for broke. We recommend starting with a bet only twice that of the minimum for the first hand then raising or lowering your bet based on the previous hand's performance. If you win the first hand, increase your bet, but if not, lower the bet. This way you resist the urge to chase a losing streak with too much good money and only bet more after you've already won a little.

Keystone Pournaments

This is a "duplicate" tournament. Players are divided into six tables, but the dice roll the same on every table. This is to keep the tournament fair and so that all players are competing on the same series of rolls. To win this tournament, you must have the most chips at the end of five full games.

Trips or Bust

The AI players in a Keystone tournament tend to bet randomly. This means that, while most of them will lose, some of them will usually win. When they do hit a big win, it will be because of long-odds bets such as hardways and trips. To make sure that these players don't get ahead of you, concentrate on similar long shot bets so that you have a good chance of staying even with the players who get ahead. If you bet the absolute minimum, you can also win the Keystone tournament, but only if none of your opponents gets lucky!

Spinnerbox Pournaments

This game has 20 players, each of whom takes 100 spins on the same Spinnerbox game. To win, just have the most chips total at the end. You'll notice that the tournament game is quite a bit "looser" than a standard Spinnerbox game, paying back roughly 500%. This is because Tournament chips have no gold value, so you might as well have the fun of hitting a few jackpots on your way!

Play it Fast

Since you can't adjust your bet in a Spinnerbox tournament, there's little you can do other than press the A Button as quickly as you can in hopes of winning and at least complete the tournament rapidly so you can play again that much sooner.

In addition to gambling at the Pub Games, there are also a number of jobs that you can do to earn money. Each of these jobs is quite simple; none require more than a single well-timed tap of the A Button. However, they can earn you huge money in little time. Although these jobs are intentionally simplistic, they are one of the better ways of earning money in the game. Each of these jobs offers quicker and safer access to riches than any of the Pub Games. They are also easier and faster than completing Bounty Hunter and Assassination Society missions. So keep your eyes peeled for job openings and work your way up to a 4- or 5-star woodcutter, blacksmith, or bartender and start really earning the money!

Sleep the Week Away

If the job you're looking for isn't currently available, find yourself a bed and sleep for seven days. Jobs become available every ten to twenty days or so and sleeping through a week is the best way to advance the calendar and hopefully get access to a job or side-job that wasn't previously available. Just remember that prolonged sleeping will lead to increased corruption. After all, sloth is one of the deadly sins!

Tap the A Button when the target is over the sweet spot to score a good hammer. Make a perfect sword to increase your gold multiplier.

Locations: Bowerstone Market, Westcliff, and Bloodstone

	BLACKSMITH JOB GROW	TH
Skill Rating	Earning Requirement	Base Pay per Sword
*	0 Gold	4 Gold
	60 Gold	16 Gold
	800 Gold	54 Gold
	8000 Gold	96 Gold
*	32000 Gold	150 Gold

The blacksmith job is the most difficult of the three jobs, especially once you rise to a higher level skill rating. The reason for this is that it takes five successful swings of the hammer to earn any money and the sweet spot's position on the meter and the speed at which the cursor moves changes with each swing. The cursor also alternates sides, thereby making it even trickier. You need to really concentrate when working as a blacksmith, more than with any other job, in order to get the gold multiplier to a high number. Don't be afraid to let the cursor go past the sweet spot on the initial pass if it's moving quickly. The sweet spot will shrink, but you'll be able to time your button press better on the second pass.

Hit the A Button when the target is over the sweet spot to score a good chop. The faster you chop, the more gold you'll make. Score 10 chps in a row without missing to build up your gold multiplier.

Locations: Oakfield and Brightwood

ODCUTTER JOB GROV	лн
Skill Rating	Earning Requirement	Base Pay per Log
*	0 Gold	1-3 Gold
	100 Gold	3-12 Gold
	1000 Gold	11-27 Gold
	10000 Gold	10-48 Gold
*	40000 Gold	15-75 Gold

Working as a woodcutter has the benefit of earning money with every button press, but you need to successfully chop ten logs in order to raise the gold multiplier. Nevertheless, this is a considerably easier task than working as a blacksmith and you can earn money quite quickly. The position of the sweet spot will start to shift around a bit once you get a higher gold multiplier, especially at the higher skill levels, but you can always let the cursor pass and hit it on the second try. The sweet spot will expand and turn from green to yellow to orange before turning red. You can still successfully chop the log by stopping the cursor in any of these colors, but you will earn less money for not chopping in the green.

Tap the A Button to serve a pint. The longer you pour, the better the head on the beer. But be careful not to spill! Pull 3 perfect pints in a row to increase your gold multiplier.

Locations: Oakfield, Bowerstone Market, Westcliff, Rookridge, and Bloodstone

Skill Rating	Earning Requirement	Base Pay per Pint	Cropped Mug Penalty
Skill hattily	Carring nequirement
*	0 Gold	3 Gold	-2 Gold
	80 Gold	12 Gold	-8 Gold
	800 Gold	27 Gold	-18 Gold
	8000 Gold	48 Gold	-32 Gold
*	32000 Gold	75 Gold	-50 Gold

There's no denying that being a bartender is the best job of the three. For starters, the sweet spot is always in the same spot and the meter fills in the same way with every pour. Secondly, it pays on every successful pour, and the gold multiplier increases every third pour. Although there is there is a penalty for breaking a mug if you are slow in pressing the A Button, there is plenty of margin for error to avoid this. Best of all, each of the bars has a vertical beam positioned directly to the right of your Hero as he/she is pulling beers. The left-hand edge of this beam matches up almost perfectly with the start of the green zone in the meter. Anticipate the meter getting to this point and press the A Button just right as it approaches the beam.

Bounty Hunter

Help rid Albion of dangerous creatures and criminals.

Bounty Hunter missions can provide a welcome source of quick and relatively painless money, so long as you don't mind traveling back and forth to areas you may not have been headed to. These jobs are given out by City Guards, typically in Bowerstone Market, and require you to travel to a specific location and slaughter a specific number of monsters or criminals that have become a problem for the locals. Once you receive the assignment, all you need to do is fast-travel to the area in question and kill the number of enemies specified in the lower right-hand corner of the screen. Once that's done, return to the City Guard to collect your payment. These jobs are randomly generated and the difficulty is dependent on the type and number of enemies you have to eliminate.

Assassinate the Society's chosen target.

Assassination Society jobs will pop up periodically throughout your journey, but will be more common to those Heroes who begin their adventure by giving the Search Warrants to Arfur during the Childhood phase of the game. These missions are randomly generated and pay thousands of gold, but also carry a corruption penalty of -30 purity. That said, they can be quite fun to participate in so give them a try.

Each Assassination Society job begins with you receiving the contract from the society's contact. Check your Books & Documents section of your inventory and read the contract to learn who the mark is. The contract will specify who you must kill, where he/she can be located, why you're killing him, and also any specific rules for you to follow.

You're typically going to need to kill the mark where there are no witnesses. The easiest way to do this is to have him follow you someplace quiet. Consider buying a house somewhere in the area and, if appropriate, giving an engagement ring to the mark to guarantee he'll follow you. Once you have him alone, kill him. You'll need to return to the member who gave you the contract to get paid.

Find and rescue the slaves.

Slave Rescue quests provide a seemingly never-ending series of jobs for the moral Hero to participate in. These quests each require you to head to a particular area where slaves are being imprisoned and free them from their captives. These quests start out easy enough, but the difficulty will increase at random, depending on where the slaves are being held and what type of enemy is hoarding them. Fast-travel to the area, defeat the enemies guarding the cage and use the key the final enemy gives up to unlock the cage and free the prisoners. These quests provide quick sources of morality and renown and should not be overlooked.

A hard labor agency is in need of new 'recruits'.

Civilian Displacement jobs are the exact opposite of the Slave Rescue assignments. Rather than trying to free a person from captivity, these missions require you to do the capturing. Meet the client to receive the order details and inspect the contract to see how many civilians are needed, what their occupation is, and what they look like. These missions are randomly generated and carry varying degrees of risk. Sometimes the order will be very specific, and other times it won't.

Once you know what type of person you're looking for, give the description some thought and go to the place where they're most likely to be. Most of the orders can be filled in Bowerstone Market, but you may need to look elsewhere on occasion. And regardless which area you head to find your recruit, always check the local pub first. Once you find the person fitting the description on the order, give them the Follow expression and lead them outside. Make sure they're following you, then fast-travel to the area specified in the quest description and make the delivery. Completing Civilian Displacement jobs pays thousands of gold, but further tilts your morality towards Evil.

The Archaeologist

The archaeologist at Fairfax Gardens offered you several quests during the Adolescence phase of the adventure (see Quest Guide for complete details), but that wasn't the last of her missions for you. Several more will become available during Adulthood and then even more in the sandbox portion of the game (after you complete the story). The table here lists each of the artifact locations and the renown you'll receive for completing them. Remember, all you need to do is to go to the region where the artifact is then follow your dog to the dig site. Retrieve the item and bring it to Belle at Fairfax Gardens to get a reward and another quest.

Belle won't be in her normal position when you return with the 13th artifact. Instead, she'll be standing in the excavation pit near a very large door. The final scroll will give her the code she needs to unlock the door, now she just wants you to head into the tomb and retrieve The Archon's Dream from the chest inside. Whether you choose to keep the gemstone or give it to Belle is up to you, but it is worth a small boatload of gold, so we suggest keeping it. Turn your safety off and slice her up.

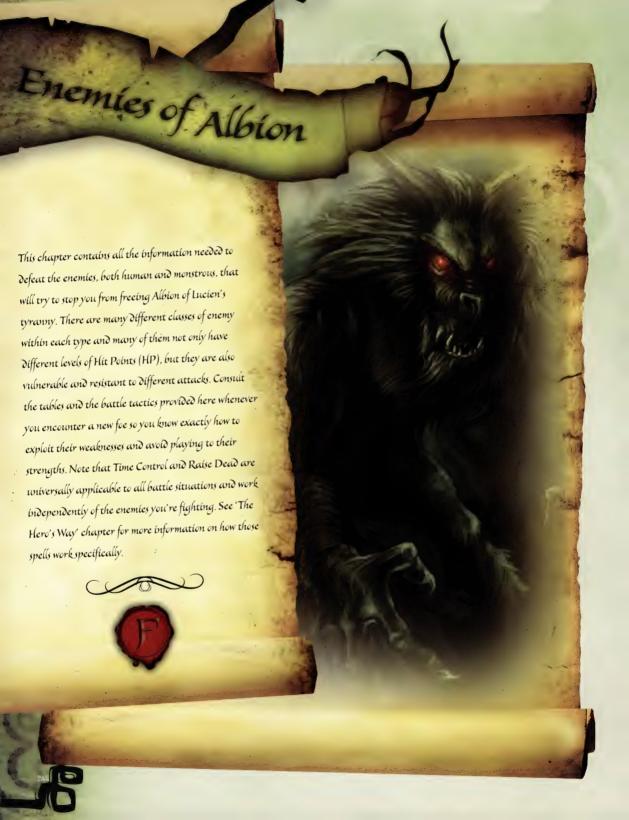

You are a Crucible champion. But there are still records to be broken and prizes to be won.

You'll be able to return to the Crucible at any time after escaping from the Tattered Spire. There are several reasons why you'd want to enter the Crucible again. For starters, it's unlikely that you managed eight perfect rounds on your initial visit so you still have The Chopper to win. Secondly, participating in the Crucible with either the Discipline or Golden Touch augment equipped can earn you far more experience or gold than you could anywhere else. Lastly, the Crucible is a lot of fun. And that's got to count for something, right? Follow these tips geared to high-level characters and breeze through all eight rounds and earn the legendary axe!

Bandits are the lowest form of human enemy you'll encounter. These swordwielding lowlifes prey on innocent, helpless travelers and imprison many of them as slaves. Although they travel in packs, they typically lack the coordination and intelligence necessary to develop any semblance of group strategy.

The Hero can make quick work of the bandits by taking advantage of their known weaknesses, of which there are several. For starters, most forms of bandits are vulnerable to ranged weaponry, thereby giving you a huge advantage if you can spot them early and snipe them from afar. If that's impossible and the bandits begin to swarm around you, look no further than the Inferno spell. Many of the bandits, particularly the higher powered ones, are vulnerable to all sorts of magic spells, but there's little denying the power of Inferno so light them up!

The Spire guards are an elite set of warriors who do Lucien's bidding, which explains their seemingly constant presence at Brightwood Tower. Spire guards are capable swordsmen with a knack for defense. Equipped with katana, the Spire guards are capable of attacking with surprising speed. Soldier and soldier elite level Spire guards are capable of unleashing a ground-based shockwave that sends a bolt of spikes through the ground in your direction. Never stand directly in front of these higher-level enemies.

The basic Spire guards don't have any particular weaknesses or resistances, but they are quite a bit harder to damage than other human enemies thanks to their training and thick armor. Stay on the move (rolling is the key to avoiding their sword slashes) and alternate between Flourishes and gunshot blasts. Use Force Push to keep them from getting too close and Time Control to buy yourself time to unleash a high-level magic spell.

Highwaymen are far tougher than everyday bandits and are equipped with both a sword and a rifle. They travel in packs and are fierce combatants who can defend as well if not better than Spire guards and attack with much greater force than bandits. Fortunately for the Hero, they should have more than enough firepower to deal with them by the time they make themselves known.

Highwaymen aren't as susceptible to Force Push or Chaos spells, but a Level 3 Inferno spell will all but wipe them out; just make sure to use Time Control or Raise Dead to buy you the time it takes to cast it. The speed of the highwaymen makes using ranged weaponry tough, especially if they get close to you, but a few well-aimed headshots can certainly put a dent in their plans!

Only the most devilish of Heroes will bring blade to the innocent, let alone resist arrest long enough to force the city guards to call for backup. But if this is your plan, then know that the city guards (and body guards in the Assassination jobs) have little resistances and can be slain in any number of ways. They'll fight with guns and swords, but they have no match for your Inferno spell, nor could they withstand any other Level 3 surround spell. Let them have it, then get running before even more city guards arrive on the scene.

Giant beetles rise up from the ground and attack in swarms as you near their underground hives. Most giant beetles do most of their damage by slamming into their prey while flying around or by trying to latching onto its face and pinching it repeatedly. These dive-bombing insects move slowly and don't inflict much damage, but they can bring down an inexperienced Hero if given the opportunity. They are extremely susceptible to all manner of attacks the weakest and can be defeated with a single slash of worst swords. Mash the buttons and rattle the Left Thumbstick back and forth to shake a Facehugger loose.

Some giant beetles hang back and attack from afar by spitting a toxic purple substance. These projectile attacks aren't terribly common and are also quite easy to avoid, especially once you have learned the Roll ability. These spitballs inflict more damage than the physical attacks so keep your eyes peeled for giant beetles lurking in the distance. Use your ranged weaponry to defeat them as soon as they're spotted.

Hobbes are small cave-dwelling creatures that rely on their fangs, claws, and maces to beat interlopers to death. Some say they turn small children into hobbes, while others think they just eat them. Either way, they are certainly nothing to be trifled with. Hobbes attack with vicious aggression and typically attack in groups. They are capable fighters, skilled at blocking melee attacks with surprising skill. As such, it is best to beat them back with ranged attacks and magic spells. Area-effect spells are particularly useful given their tendency to surround their prey. Use Force Push and Vortex to knock them about, then finish them off with a blast of Inferno or Shock.

Although there are many types of hobbes, most of them are pretty similar save for the ones on stilts and the various skeleton types. These two varieties of hobbes may seem quite different, but they do share one common feature—Inferno is all but useless against them. Skeleton hobbes are resistant to Inferno and the stilt-walking leaders can stride right through the flames without fear. For that reason, we recommend using Shock and blunt melee weapons to take out the skeletons and Sub-Targeted headshots to dispose of the stilt-using hobbes.

The hollow men are quite unlike any other human-like creature the Hero has seen. They float nearby as twinkling lights, then plunge into the ground and erupt as ghastly reanimated corpses. Hollow men carry sickles and other crude melee weapons, and attack at close range. They are a slower form of enemy, but can be extremely dangerous as they tend to attack in large groups.

Most hollow men are incredibly susceptible to fire damage so make full use of the Inferno spell when battling them. A Level 2 Inferno cast targeted at an Easy or Regular level hollow man will kill it on the spot. Melee and ranged weapons are useful too, but neither are nearly as effective as a fireball targeted at their dried up skin and loose, sagging clothes! Those who follow a path of moral righteousness and obtain the Rising Sun legendary weapon will have an advantage against the elder hollow men during the latter stages of the story, as these much tougher hollow men aren't as vulnerable to most magic as the other hollow men are. Regardless of the type of hollow man you face, a Sub-Targeted headshot from a powerful weapon will almost always 😹 stop them cold!

Trolls are unlike any creature you'll see elsewhere in Albion. They are massive creatures that spin in place heaving rocks and debris at their prey. Trolls are also capable of sending a massive shockwave across the ground; this is a targeted attack rather than area-of-effect. Each of the trolls has a number of weak spots on their body. These are what you must hit to weaken it. They aren't always visible, so take cover or stay on the run until they appear, then attack!

Getting close to a troll is simply out of the question. The beasts are far too strong to attempt a melee the troll while watching for it to attack. Move out of the way of the attack, then stop and either shoot one of the weakspots on its body or, better yet, take advantage of its vulnerability and cast a Level attack. It's possible, but the reward doesn't justify the risk. Instead, keep on the move circling around 2 or higher spell in hopes of damaging multiple weakspots at once! Forest trolls are susceptible to Inferno, Shock, and Blades, while swamp trolls are particularly vulnerable to the Vortex spell. Blades work with any of the trolls, and are quick to be summoned. Their autotargeting feature is a nice bonus since they immediately go for the weak spots—even the hard to reach ones. A Blades spell also allows you to focus on your Hero's actions without constant recasting. It's typically easiest to use a combination of Time Control and ranged attacks.

Shards are large pyramid-shaped monstrosities that are sent from The Tattered Spire to deliver Spire guards to the battle. They emit powerful rays that teleport Spire guards into the area. Because of this, destroying Shards has to be a top priority whenever they appear. The outer shell of a Shard is impenetrable to attacks so you have to await the perfect moment and release your full fury. Eventually, the Shard will reveal its weak spot—a ball of white energy within. Hit that weak spot with full-powered spells and ranged attacks!

Balverines

Balverines are among the most terrifying creatures in Albion. They appear as though they're half man and half wolf, but are far stronger and faster than either species alone. Balverines use their giant hands and long nails to claw and tear at their prey with rapid swipes. Balverines are not only ferociously aggressive, but they are capable of leaping high into the air (completely out of sight) and landing behind their opponent for a surprise attack.

The best way to fend off a balverine attack is with Inferno magic—their fur is highly flammable! There are other ways of dealing with balverines, though, especially if you've achieved 100% goodness and are using a weapon equipped with a Holy Augment. For starters, try using a fast melee weapon to attack in a chain. The balverine will leap into the air to break your attack. Quickly roll out of the way to avoid having it land behind you. Get up and renew the chain to finish it off! If you're in a situation when multiple balverines continue to appear, cast Raise Dead to summon the spirits of the deceased to fight on your behalf.

Banshees are unlike other creatures you've encountered in that they float above the ground and use their powers to summon a cadre of tiny Shadow Children to attack. The banshee itself will use a brutal Soul Suck attack if you stray too close, but they tend to let their minions fight for them. Wipe out the shadow creatures with a Level 2 or 3 area spell, then take airn at the main attraction once it uncovers its face.

Banshees are immune to the Chaos spell and tend to be unaffected by area spells thanks to their ability to float.

You can inflict significant damage with melee attacks and targeted spells, but the best ways to handle a Banshee are attacks with high-level ranged or melee weapons, or level 3+ targeted spells such as Blades. Stand back and wait for the banshee to let out a scream and uncover its face—this will happen once you've killed its little Shadow Children. That's your signal that the banshee can be targeted. Use your ranged weapon, preferably with the Sub-Targeting ability, and fire straight into its head! It's possible to drop a banshee with a Master-level crossbow in just a few shots, provided you aim for the head! You only have a few seconds before it summons another wave of Shadow Children and covers its face again, so act fast!

Shadow creatures are confined to the Shadow Court in Wraithmarsh (except for banshee children) and are essentially stronger, darker, versions of the enemies you face elsewhere. Shadow creatures are all black and semi-transparent, but dreadfully strong and with far fewer vulnerabilities. The best way to handle the various shadow creatures is with the Inferno spell, particularly if you're playing as an evil Hero and have already earned your Evil horns. Inferno is the only attack that any Hero can use effectively against every type of shadow creature.

You'll encounter the ghost pirates and their leader, Captain Dread, at the Sinkhole cave. These ghostly assailants are every bit as aggressive as you'd expect the ghosts of dead pirates to be. The standard ghost pirate is vulnerable to Inferno and attacks from Holy Heroes, but they have no other vulnerabilities. Use Time Control and Inferno to thin their numbers, then switch to melee and ranged attacks. Flourishes and headshots will enable you to finish off the remaining ghost pirates while getting some practice for Captain Dread. Their leader is much bigger than the other ghost pirates and is resistant and/or immune to all magic attacks. Nevertheless, you can slow him down with Time Control and tilt the odds in your favor with the Raise Dead spell, particularly if you cast it immediately after finishing off the last ghost pirate.

A Sincere Phank You from the Editor

Wow. Closing in on a decade in the strategy guide business and I'm still meeting absolutely extraordinary people. This project was a fantastic experience and everyone we dealt with both at Microsoft and Lionhead Studios was, to put it simply, remarkable. First off, thanks to the whole Fable II team. Jeff MacDermot, John Miller, Jeremie Texier, & Jason York went beyond the "extra mile" marker about a week after the process began. Thanks guys. Ryan Wilkerson was 110% behind this thing from the moment his hat was thrown into the ring and all I can say is "Thanks a million." John McCormack is just an incredible person and I feel as if I've become a better person on all fronts just by having worked with him on this amazing project. Lastly, Nancy Figatner, our tireless contact at Microsoft worked non-stop to make sure that this entire project came off without a hitch—and it did. Thank you Nancy, for everything.

Author Acknowledgments

A book of this magnitude doesn't come together without the hard work and assistance of many people, and nobody was more helpful than Jeff MacDermot of Microsoft Game Studios. Jeff painstakingly answered every question I could throw his way and did it with a speed and sense of humor that made working with him a real joy. Of course, Jeff doesn't work alone so I must also thank everyone at Microsoft and Lionhead Studios who helped funnel tips and data through him. Additionally, I also want to thank Jason York and John Miller for their assistance with the Pub Games portion of this guidebook. It was much appreciated! A tremendous amount of credit also needs to go to my editor Christian Sumner of BradyGames, one of the hardest working guys in the industry. Christian continually challenges each of us to put out the best guidebook we can and offers a perfect blend of guidance, support, and patience that we authors crave. Thanks Xian! I also want to thank Carol Stamile of BradyGames for the incredible design work she did for this book, and everyone else at BradyGames who contribute to the look and feel—it really would be just a collection of text and screenshots without their talents. Lastly, I want to thank Leigh Davis, Mike Degler, and David Waybright of BradyGames for giving me the honor of writing this guidebook.

About the Author

Doug Walsh has been authoring strategy guides for BradyGames for over eight years and has over seventy books to his credit including guidebooks for Bioshock, Gears of War, and Tales of Vesperia to name but a few. He lives in Snoqualmie, Washington with his wife and two dogs and spends what little free time he has mountain biking in the hills near his home. Doug took a short break during the writing of this book to compete against Lance Armstrong in the hundred mile Leadville Trail 100 mountain bike race high in the mountains of Colorado. Lance beat him—by a lot.
